Spring in Chicago
Sam Mule Is Bumped—Next?
To Discourage Airmen
Sad Desert, No Dates

—By Arthur Brisbane—

CHICAGO, Ill., April 21—Fine spring weather here, and no weather is finer than good weather in Chicago.

Men 20 stories in the air hang outside of windows, cleaning them, calmly making a living, and indignant, most of them, because they are forced to use safety devices.

The 1833 exposition, planned to celebrate "one hundred years of science," from 1833 to 1933, is progressing well. It has a fine background, with big Lake Michigan on one side stretching toward the East, huge Chicago and its skyscrapers to the West, and around it, monuments to Chicago's energy and good citizenship.

The great Marshall Field Museum is one of the finest buildings in America and one of the world's great museums. Beyond it stands the Aquarium, given by John G. Shedd, and at the water's edge the Planetarium, given by Max Adler, in which all the movements, sizes and distances of earth, moon, sun, neighbor planets, stars, comets and nebulae are made plain. There is, in America, no more important educational institution than that Planetarium, except the public school.

Such men as Marshall Field and Max Adler should have monuments in Chicago, bigger and better than any others, except the Lincoln monument. It would be profitable, as well as just, to honor good citizenship, and thus encourage it.

Today supplies its usual story of a life snuffed out, such as you read daily here and in New York.

Today's victim, Sam Mule, alias Morley, would be hurt if he could know what small headlines, how few words are devoted to his killing.

He was an ex-convict and a bootlegger "muscling in" on territory pre-empted by his betters in the great industry.

A blonde lady and two men rented a room opposite Mule's headquarters. The lady sat at the window in a rocking chair "scattering cigaret stubs about, to pass the time while she watched."

Once Mule came by, but his new wife, Lillian, 22-year-old Minnesota girl, was with him. Slugs from sawed-off shot guns scatter, so they let her pass. She had done nothing to make her death desirable. Next day Mule came, alone, on his last earthly journey. Slugs blew off the top of his head.

This little incident will interest the future Froissarts, chronicling our doings, chiefly because it now attracts so little attention.

We have one of our biggest industries, bootlegging, organized on a murder basis and take it for granted.

Senator Capper of Kansas tells the House that our nation must "provide controlled inflation of the currency," and if it fails to do so, Congress will print two and a half billion dollars' worth of currency, pay the soldiers' bonus bill in full and distribute the money all over the country. That, Senator Capper says, would help everybody. Kansas would get thirty-five million of the new dollars.

A bill introduced in the House of Representatives to reduce drastically the pay of officers that fly in both branches of our air service reflects little credit on the judgment of the statesman of the man introducing the bill.

A congressman, sitting at his ease in the safety of a comfortable chair, enjoying his ten-thousand-dollar-a-year salary, cuts a poor figure when he seeks to reduce the pay of flight officers, called upon every day to risk life in the most important branch of the national defense.

Army and navy flight officers, and mechanics that accompany them in their flights, risk their lives for pay that is now far too small, since their families may at any moment be left dependent.

They are called upon to experiment with new planes, to carry out, as a matter of routine, dangerous, close-formation flying at terrific speed. The economical congressman should just once, try the well-named "hell diving," the plane plunging perpendicular downward, 300 miles an hour, practicing the discharge of bombs at enemy craft.

Our airplane defense is weak enough as it is, without any mean, stingy, narrow-minded and contemptible economy to discourage the airmen on whom the country relies for the development of our air force now, as it would rely on them for its safety in time of war.

Joseph H. Appel of New York, wandering over the desert in Africa with his wife, sends word from Biskra that business depression has reached those distant places. A blight on the date palms has wiped out the natives' chief food supply, and a cash blight, nearer home, has nearly wiped out the tourist

MAYOR SEES 'WALKAWAY' ON TUESDAY

Predicts N. Y. Governor Will Carry Every District in Race for Delegates

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

"Six weeks ago it might have looked bad. Today—well, we'll win every district."

Bubbling over with enthusiasm, Mayor Curley today made this prediction, as he plunged into the final whirlpool of Roosevelt rallies and radio appeals.

Big gatherings in Charlestown, the North End, South Boston and Dorchester cheered the mayor lustily as he drove home arguments in favor of Roosevelt's candidacy and whipsawed the political prima donnas in the opposition camp.

Hearty cheers greeted his statement that he "is still going strong" despite the fact that he has been named second for the last 30 years.

ON CITY WORKERS

The mayor especially expressed his confidence in the loyalty of the 30,000 city employes who had been urged by a "lady" speaker in the Smith camp, at a rally in Robert Gould Shaw school, to put "Curley on the spot" in the secrecy of the polling booth.

"I don't understand that language," the mayor declared, "for the reason that I have not done anything that would give offense to any city employe. The governor was good enough to recommend a reduction of 10 per cent in the salaries of State employes. If I had adopted it the city employes would be getting 10 per cent less than they are getting now.

"When you take a man getting $30 each week and cut him down 10 per cent you are taking $3 off his pay and every other salary in proportion. I refused to do it."

A wave of cheering, interspersed with loud shouts, "We're with you, Jim," interrupted the mayor's address.

Continuing, the mayor said:

"So there is no reason why any

The cold, gray dawn of the morning after Harvard's wildest riot ushered in this day of reckoning and the following developments:

1—Dist. Atty Warren L. Bishop said he intended to make "a sweeping investigation and present the entire matter to the grand jury."

2—Mayor Russell of Cambridge made an appointment to lay a personal protest before President Lowell of Harvard late today.

3—Nine Harvard students and three laborers arrested during the rioting were released without bail when their cases were continued.

4—Police Chief John J. McBride called the Harvard rioters "hoodlums."

5—Acting Chief Michael J. Brennan called the riot a "harmless prank" and said (heh, heh) that the boys were just having a little fun.

6—A. C. Hanford, Harvard dean, promised university action would follow a complete investigation of the affair.

7—Maj. Charles J. Apted, head of the Harvard police, said: "Why, it was not as bad as the riot in 1926."

8—William J. Bender, assistant dean of freshmen, said: "A policeman took a poke at me."

Record warm weather, with temperatures running higher than any other day this year, was the lot of Boston today, with prospects of continuance.

At 3 p. m. the mercury registered 76 degrees, 10 degrees over the reading at the same hour yesterday. The record for April 22 was reached in 1923 and 1926 with recordings at 78 degrees.

Stabilize Purchasing Power of the Dollar

WORLD economic conditions need credit expansion and currency expansion.

Deflation has been general and has been aggravated by added demonetization of silver.

By correcting the monetary cause of continuing depression the government can stimulate the life blood of credit to resume its flow through our economic system.

There is a lot of loose talk about over-production.

There is, of course, no actual general over-production, while millions lack comforts, conveniences and even necessities.

There is, however, general lack of purchasing power due in part to tremendous contraction of circulating media.

The circulating medium is only in very small part coin. It is only in comparatively small part government and federal reserve notes.

BY far the greatest part is the commercial paper of private institutions and responsible private persons, which results in deposit currency and consists of bank deposits subject to check.

When credit is constrained and business diminishes, this private paper largely disappears from circulation in business transactions.

The well known economic principle is that as the volume of the circulating medium diminishes, the value of the dollar or monetary unit increases, and the more the circulating medium is contracted the dearer the dollar becomes and the more difficult to secure.

All of which means further hardening of credit arteries. Furthermore, the dearer the dollar, the fewer the dollars the producers get for their product and the workers get for their labor.

Which means not only deterioration of prices of products but of values of stocks on hand and also reduction of employment.

Consequently, in periods of excessive deflation, everybody is poor except creditors, who collect debts in dollars worth much more than their value at the time the debts were incurred.

This is a terrible burden on the borrowing classes, which are also largely the enterprising and business creating classes.

THUS the valuable producing, employing, and working elements of the community are penalized for the benefit of the unproductive elements.

BRUSH TELLS 'BEAR' RAID SECRETS

Big Trader Parries the Senate Thrusts; Says Capone Piker Compared to Wall St.

Washington, April 22 (AP)—Matthew C. Brush, veteran Wall st. trader and president of the American International Corp., was the first of the subpoenaed brokers and traders called to testify today in the Senate banking committee's investigation of bear raids to depress the stock market.

In the list made public by the committee yesterday, Brush was recorded as short at the close of the stock exchange on April 8 in 20,000 shares of a variety of stocks.

These included 1500 American Can, 1000 Bethlehem Steel, 1000 U. S. Steel, 500 DuPont, 1000 A. T. & T., 1000 Westinghouse, 2000 General Motors, 500 International Harvester and 100 Woolworth.

Brush said today the American Brush Co., which had one of the biggest short accounts listed, was headed by his brother, G. S. Brush. After Brush was sworn, he told William A. Gray, committee counsel, he was associated with about 50 firms.

He testified he had been in the market since the summer of 1921.

"When I first started it was pretty skinny," he continued, in a low voice. "I had on the long side about 125,000 shares at one time."

NOT SHORT IN BOOM.

"You trade on both sides?"

"Yes."

"What volume did you ever have on the short side?"

"Approximately the same," said Brush, referring to the 125,000 share total.

Gray asked the maximum value of Brush's holdings.

The trader consulted an assistant and then testified that in August, 1929, the "liquidating value" of his entire holdings was $15,000,000.

"Were you ever short during the peak of 1929?" Gray asked.

"I don't think I was ever short at that time," he replied.

Brush said he never started selling short until the spring of 1930.

HOW HE WORKS IT.

"You thought you were executing good judgment?" asked Gray.

"I would have if I had stayed with it," responded Brush. "The only time to sell short,' he added, "is when there is demand.

"If you start selling 5000 shares of a stock when it is 70, by the time you have got off the last 1000 it might be 80.

Deputy Chief Dodges Death in Brush Fire

Woods and brush fires blazing in Essex and Middlesex counties nearly cost the life of a deputy fire chief in Danvers today, threatened many homes and resulted in firemen of 18 Essex County cities and towns combining to fight the largest of the blazes, at the Peabody-Danvers line.

Deputy Fire Chief William A. Derry of Danvers, speeding to the Peabody-Danvers fire, whose flames were visible for 35 miles, crashed into a tree on the Poet Whittier estate and wrecked his car.

The chief, speeding along Summer st., was forced to swerve sharply when another car, declared by police to be operated by Melvin King of Danvers, cut in front.

Losing control of his machine, Derry left the road and crashed the tree. His wrecked car then overturned, pinning Derry beneath.

This fire, starting within the Danvers line, spread into West Peabody, and in the teeth of a stiff northwest wind, made such rapid headway that aid was asked from 18 cities and towns.

In North Reading, in the Park st. section, scores of residences were threatened by a fire which 200 volunteers set out to battle with the Reading and Andover firemen.

At another fire, in the Andover-Burlington-Billerica line, when the alarm was sounded it was found that so many Andover firemen had responded to a call for aid in North Reading, there were no fighters available in Andover to battle their own flames.

BANDITS SLUG A SO. END DOCTOR

Two armed men who fled after felling him from behind with some blunt instrument, and firing a shot wild, left Dr. Samuel Courtney, 60, severely injured in his office at 98 West Springfield st., South End, today.

Less than half an hour later a man wearing a cap of a type described by the doctor as that of a third man who sat at the wheel of an automobile, walked into Charlestown police station and reported his automobile had been stolen.

The number of the car he gave was the same as that given by the doctor to police as that of the car in which the trio fled.

Dr. Courtney was alone in his office. When the two men entered they had handkerchiefs around their heads and partially over their eyes, and when Dr. Courtney asked the trouble they made no reply.

Instead, one struck him on the head from behind. As he went down, he said, he heard a shot but was not hit.

As the men fled, Dr. Courtney had just time to get to his feet and take the number of the car. Nothing was stolen in the attack.

He was taken to City Hospital and treated for a two-inch gash on the head.

$25,800 GIVEN AUTO VICTIMS

Springfield, April 22 (AP)—Damages totaling $25,800 were reported today by an auditor in an action growing out of an unusual automobile accident.

Cars driven by Walter Sanszuk and John McCarthy collided at an intersection and the impact threw one car onto the sidewalk, where it struck Anna M. Rhodes and Alma Solomon, causing severe and permanent injuries.

The auditor finds both drivers negligent and awards each woman a total of $12,900 from the two defendants.

WRINGING WET ROOSEVELT RALLY—BOSTON COMMON—SATURDAY, 1 P. M.

BRUSH, ON SENATE GRILL, BARES SHORT SECRETS

'CAPONE PIKER COMPARED TO WALL ST.'

Big Trader, Once Short 125,000 Shares, Defends "Patriotism"

short position you ought to sell when the market is rising. Be ahead of the turn.

"If you think a stock is going up, I buy it. I am not a trader from day to day or during the day. I take a position. If I think a stock is going down, I sell."

Asked to detail operations in the market, Brush explained some large traders put in orders for purchases or sales at a range of points.

SPILLS SECRET BEANS.

"That is the other fellow's school of thought—mine, mine," he added. "I buy or sell where I think it is right."

Brush drew laughter as he explained a short sale which he conceded "depresses the market" and added:

"I am going to get shot when I get back to New York anyway, so I might as well tell you."

The factor Brush pointed out was where a short sale is made when some other operator is liquidating a large block.

"Suppose," he said, "his sales have sent the price down from 30 to 29, and he has only disposed of part of his block. I come in and offer 5000 at 29¾. The chances are that makes the supply greater than the demand and I've had an influence in depressing the price."

He said there were times when the short interest increased even on a rising market.

"There are so many ramifications I don't think you can apply any rule," he added. "If there is twice as much supply as demand," Brush said, "then the market goes down."

POOR PUBLIC, "FOOLS"

"If I take a position in the market I take it for weeks or months or a year.

"For that day by day racket you've got to stay there at the over a stein of beer. Steel closed up a point. Let's go in on it. In the morning he goes in and I sell him the very stock used to put the price up the night before. Down goes the price. Of course I don't trade that way. It is too fast for me."

Brush said he had never been in a pool but he agreed that pools exist.

CAPONE A "PIKER"

"You say you are afraid to go back to New York?" interrupted Senator Brookhart (R.), Iowa. "Is there an Al Capone racket up there?"

"Al Capone is a piker compared to what they will do to me," shot back Brush as laughter roared.

Referring to the 1929 boom, Brush said "every man, woman and child, church and library was in it."

Asked about a ban on short selling, Brush warned "you'll get terrific swings in the market."

"I think the term 'short selling' has become extremely unfortunate," he added. "The transaction is in fact a definite future contract."

Gray asked Brush about other means of manipulating the market, including "pegging the price."

Brush said it was possible to peg the market and recalled the reported Rockefeller offer of 1928 to buy a million shares of Standard Oil of New Jersey at 50.

He said he had never known of instances of "rigging the market" by buying openly and selling secretly to create bull sentiment.

Senator Bulkley asked, "Is short selling holding down the recovery."

"I don't think my short account has any more effect on the condition of the country than a rabbit," asserted Brush.

"But you don't want the price to go down," said Bulkley.

"Yes, but I don't and can't do anything to make the price go down."

HINT OF SCANDAL

"As a patriot, do you think you are justified in being short now?" asked Bulkley.

"I don't think patriotism has a thing to do with it," contended Brush. "I don't think my short position has any relation to prosperity or patriotism. If it is proper for me to buy something when I think it is going up I think it is proper for me to sell when I think it is going down."

The committee adjourned until 2:30. After the hearing, Senator Couzens criticized Gray for being so "tender" with Brush.

"I think Gray and Brush are pretty good friends," Couzens told newspapermen.

Rockefeller Praying for a Boom, but Selling 'Short'

Washington, April 22 (INS)—Percy A. Rockefeller, cousin of one of the richest men in the world, today said he was praying for a return of prosperity.

He made the admission while waiting to testify in the Senate committee's investigation of short selling on the stock market. Rockefeller is alleged to be one of the biggest short sellers on the market.

Asked how long he thought it would be before prosperity returned, he replied:

"It is hard to say, but I sincerely hope it will be soon —and pray so, too."

He said he hoped to see a return of normal business within a year, but warned that prosperity would not return until confidence of people was restored. However, he believed prosperity would be greater than ever when it did return.

brokers' and work at it," he explained. "Those fellows we call chiselers in New York."

He argued that it was hard to guess on the day to day fluctuations.

"If a fellow goes into the market at 11 in the morning and the President of the United States gives out a proclamation at 11:30 it is too bad," he said.

"That depends on the kind of proclamation it is?" interposed Senator Gore (D.), Oklahoma.

"Yes," conceded Brush amid laughter.

As for the knowledge of the average stock purchaser, Brush said "it is pathetic."

"Take it a fact," Gray asked, "that a good many of the public watch the board and when they see it begin to go up rush in?"

"They don't even do that," the veteran trader replied. "They get a circular in the morning from somebody, probably somebody who has been in the country two weeks, from Greece. The circular calls some stocks good. He thinks it is a great buy and goes in to buy it.

"It's no exaggeration, that Senator on my left, (Walcott) will bear that out because he was in the business before I was," added Brush as the committee laughed.

Brush said he never knew of any member of the Stock Exchange working "in cahoots" to the detriment of the public and to his own advantage.

SQUEEZING IN RAID.

Gray asked whether Whitney had been correct in saying there was no bear raiding, and Brush agreed it had not happened since November when further restrictions took effect.

Before then, he said, "with Steel at 30, an order to sell at 29 would be a cinch to get off. It's a bear raid."

"It's being done?" Gray asked.

"Not to my knowledge," Brush said. "It can't be done today."

The witness added it was just as harmful to "close up" the market as "to close down."

"Suppose I go in at the close of the market and Steel is at 29. I bid it up to 30. The market closes a point up.

"That night some fellow out in Kooksik says to his mother taxes, which take out of the incomes of the producing, employing, and borrowing classes the difficult dollars with which they are seeking to pay their doubled debts.

Consequently, many businesses fail and suspend, and many are foreclosed and taken over by the money-lending classes.

Obviously, an adequate increase in the volume of the circulating medium, including bank deposit currency, would correct most of the difficulties due to deflation, and would tend to revive business.

Restoring currency values to what they were is called RE-flation. It is inflation merely to the point of overcoming deflation.

This currency expansion and credit expansion must occur.

SOME countries have gone off the gold standard to accomplish this.

The United States would not have to go off the gold standard. It has other means of RE-flation.

It has not issued the full amount of notes that its reserves warrant.

And the Glass-Steagall law further enlarges the opportunity for legal expansion.

The Glass-Steagall law permits an additional issue of federal reserve notes to the amount of three billion five hundred million dollars.

The government should, therefore, unless there is adequate expansion of bank credit, issue its own notes and federal reserve notes within its proper legal and economic restrictions to take the place of the commercial paper withdrawn from circulation by credit contraction.

IN fact a standing policy of government and the central banking system should be to expand the circulating medium in hard times and contract it in good times so as to keep the value of the monetary unit as stable as possible.

Increasing the volume of the circulating medium without impairing the gold standard will encourage credit, revive business, stimulate production and employment, and moderate the unjust and unexpected burdens imposed upon the valuable borrowing and business creating classes by the extraordinary increase of the value of the dollar,—a condition damaging equally to them and to the nation.

LOVE NOTES KEY TO DEATH IN MILLER HOME

Handwriting Experts Called in Shooting Mystery Involving Flier and Aviatrix

Miami, Fla., April 22 (INS)—Handwriting experts today checked signatures on notes left near the bed where Haden Clarke, young "ghost writer," was found shot to death in the home of Mrs. Jessie M. Keith-Miller, famous Australian flier, whom Clarke loved.

The notes were addressed to Mrs. Keith-Miller and Captain W. N. Lancaster, former Royal Air Force pilot, who with Clarke formed the strange triangle of tangled love and tragedy.

The woman flier, released from a cell under guard of a deputy, attended funeral services for Clarke in an undertaker's chapel last night. It was the wish of Mrs. Ida Clyde Clark, mother of the slain man that the woman be asked to attend.

When they met in the chapel, the women embraced, weeping and murmuring words of mutual consolation. They remained so in each other's arms through the brief services, after which a deputy returned Mrs. Keith-Miller to her cell.

Although determined to make a complete check, Prosecutor Hawthorne said step by step he saw a suicide theory substantiated.

"It's no perfect a setting as could be imagined for murder, but it looks like suicide," the prosecutor said.

RECEIVER FOR HOE PRESS CO.

New York, April 22 (AP)—R. Hoe and Company, Inc., manufacturer of newspaper printing presses for 113 years, was petitioned into an equity receivership in federal court today. The officers of the company consented.

The action was instituted by Kenneth A. Christian, a stockholder, on a claim of $2,643. The company appointed the Irving Trust Co. and Henry R. Swartz, equity receivers.

The corporation has a funded debt of $1,500,000, and the company's dated balance sheet as of Feb. 29 last showed gross assets of $11,926,-134. Current liabilities, in addition to the funded debt, amount to $2,821,562.

FOULOIS FIGHTS AIR PAY CUTS

Washington, April 22 (AP)—Vigorous opposition to proposed reductions in the flying allowance of Army, Navy and Marine Corps pilots was expressed today by Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the Army Air Corps.

Before the House Military committee, he said the Navy appropriation bill would cut additional flying pay of Army and Marine Corps officers to a maximum of $1100 a year and that the same reduction was planned for Army aviators.

"It would turn the Army aviation service," Foulois said, "into a bunch of fair weather fliers."

MOONEY KIN TO KEEP UP FIGHT

San Francisco, April 22 (AP)—The three Mooney women—Rena, the wife; Anna, the sister, and Mary, the 87-year-old mother—today expressed determination to "carry on."

Mrs. Rena Mooney was at San Quentin prison as news came that the 16-year fight for the freedom of her husband, Thomas J. Mooney, had failed again.

The sister, secretary of the Moulders' Defense Committee, central organization in the campaign for release of the convicted dynamiter, and the aged mother, who recently returned from a nation-wide tour in her son's behalf, went to Sacramento to hear the decision.

They did not join the crowd in the executive chamber, but waited in an anteroom. Byrd Kelso of the defense committee told them the news.

The aged woman looked blankly at her daughter. "What did they say? What did they say?" she repeated.

No tears came to her eyes, but she was unable to answer questions. A few minutes later she sent word to Governor Rolph, asking an interview. The request was refused.

In a statement over her signature, which apparently had been prepared before the decision was announced, the sister, as secretary of the defense committee, said:

"This decision does not end the Mooney case. From now on the struggle will be a more determined one than ever."

YOUTHS IN WILD RIDE JAILED

Taunton, April 22—Two youths were arraigned in district court here today charged with stealing the auto of Frederick Larsen, former police commissioner of Fall River, and taking it on a mad drive for 15 miles, finally overturning in Palmer river, Rehoboth.

Emmanuel Lima, 18, of South Somerset, was given one month in the House of Correction for leaving the scene of the accident and additional sentences of 14 days each for operating after revocation of an automobile and negligent driving.

Alfred Broga, 17, of Fall River, was given a similar sentence for use of an automobile without authority.

The automobile was chased by Trooper Shea for over 10 miles. Rounding a sharp turn at Rehoboth, it overturned several times.

Police Seeking Men Who Beat Autoist

Brockton, April 22—Police today sought three men who lay in wait for Karl Bostrom, 58, of 161 Center st., Bryantville, as he was returning to his home and brutally beat him, last night.

He was treated at the Brockton Hospital for a fractured jaw and face. He gave police the registration of the auto in which they fled.

Prosperity Found! Standing on Corner in Gilman, Vt.

Gilman, Vt., April 22 (AP)—Prosperity stands firmly entrenched on a corner of Gilman's main street.

Back in the hills of Vermont near the headwaters of the Connecticut River, far away from talk of money rates, bank failures and stock market and business downfalls, Gilman has enjoyed two years of peace and prosperity.

Its leading mill, the Gilman Paper Co., is working triple shifts 24 hours a day, six days a week. Newsprint is being shipped by the carload. The mill's gum tape department cannot fill all its orders and plans are underway to extend its facilities.

The Millet Corp., manufacturers of fibre material and onion bags, is working double shifts full time, and the Craft Bag Corp., a new industry, plans to locate in Gilman shortly and turn out 60 tons of paper cement bags a day.

There's not a man in town out of work. There are no paupers and a strike never has interrupted industrial activities here.

The New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. is building an exchange, the first in five years, and a new office building is in process of construction.

The town fathers have approved a sidewalk and road program.

Approval has been given by the selectmen for a 24-piece band to play in the park fortnightly all summer and charitable organizations, for which there are no practical local needs, are actively engaged in aiding nearby communities.

GARNER SCORES HOOVER LACK OF SAVING

Speaker in Wilbur Letter Says $400,000,000 Cut Needed Only Order From President

Washington, April 22 (AP)—Speaker Garner today made public a letter to Secretary Wilbur, saying if President Hoover had directed him and other Cabinet members last October to reduce government expenses 10 per cent they could have been cut more than $400,000,000 for the coming fiscal year.

The Texan's letter to the Interior Department head was in answer to one received from Wilbur yesterday attacking the ten per cent cut made by Congress on the supply bill for his branch.

"Expenses of this government can be reduced and should be reduced $500,000,000 a year less than the amount appropriated for 1932," Garner said. "In order to do so, without hurting the government's activities, it must have the hearty co-operation of the President and his cabinet.

"Mr. Secretary, if the President had directed you and other cabinet member last October to reduce expenditures of the government at least ten per cent, you could and would have done so, or tendered your resignations, and the government would have reduced expenditures more than $400,000,000 in the coming fiscal year."

BIRD AND GAME PARKS URGED

Chicago, April 22 (AP)—Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, today proposed to the Izaac Walton League that the government turn part of its farmlands into bird and game preserves, parks and forest areas.

It always has been federal policy to develop agricultural acreage, O'Neal told delegates to the convention of the league. He said it was reasonable to expect the government to lead the way in relieving over-production "since its clear-by defined policy of agricultural expansion has brought the industry to its present distressing economic plight."

Turn in Business Seen by Selfridge

New York, April 22 (AP)—H. Gordon Selfridge, noted London department store owner, says there is marked improvement in the business situation in England, accompanied by a return of confidence and a "determination to see this thing through."

Mr. Selfridge is now on a visit to this country.

Legion Head Denounces Cut in Vets' Awards

Indianapolis, April 22—The proposal of the House Economy Committee to cut the compensation of disabled veterans was denounced by Henry L. Stevens, Jr., national commander of the American Legion.

Henry L. Stevens, Jr.

Stevens' protest came in a telegram to Rep. John McDuffie, chairman of the House Economy Committee.

Stevens stated that balancing the budget at the expense of the disabled veterans will not be approved by the American people.

Tunney's Wife and Baby Threatened in Letter

New York, April 22—A threatening note understood to concern the 5-months-old son of Gene Tunney, retired heavyweight champion, and his wife, was turned over to police, it was disclosed at headquarters.

The Tunneys received the note unsigned, at their Park ave. apartment several days ago. Police refused to reveal its contents and viewed it as the work of a crank. Tunney later denied having received such a missive or having passed it on to police.

crop. Without tourists or dates, North Africa feels like one of the speculators that went in at the top and came out at the bottom.

The natives in and around Biskra and the many oases, over which human beings have fought for 100 centuries, have one hope left. They are now praying for a plague of locusts. The insects would strip the palms and make the oases look bare, but locusts are good to eat, an acceptable sort of manna.

Biskra and other oases in North Africa are now under the best management they have ever known. France owns them, owns also the fine hotels built for tourists, and is building more of them. Everything modern, cooking, of course, excellent.

The government of France is not afraid to try anything, from hotels to railroads. And if government railroad workers strike, France has a remedy. The strikers are called to the colors and ordered to operate the road as soldiers.

To refuse would be a court-martial offense, with conviction sure, so the railroad men, changed suddenly to soldiers, go to work. Our railroad presidents would call that "government ownership with a kick in it."

Everybody agrees that this nation's railroads must be preserved, and if they are to survive the government must do something for them. How about buying them at a fair price to stockholders and letting people own and run them?

Three years ago that would have sounded like paternalism, Bolshevism, Socialism and confiscation rolled into one. But with New York Central down to 20, from nearly 300, and other roads shrunken in proportion, a suggestion to buy might not be so unwelcome.

Perhaps government ownership, retaining, of course, and paying well, the ablest railroad managers, could succeed in competition with automobiles, trucks, canals and airplanes.

Al Capone Appeals to United States Supreme Court

REOPENS FIGHT TO ESCAPE HIS PRISON TERM

Petition Asks Review of Conviction and 11-Year Sentences in Tax Cases

Washington, April 22 (AP)—Al Capone today filed in the Supreme Court a petition asking a review of the action of the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals affirming his conviction and penitentiary sentence on the charge of evading federal taxes.

In his petition Capone asserted he had not been informed by the indictment filed against him of the nature and cause of certain accusations because the indictment had been drawn in general terms which he said was contrary to a rule of the Supreme Court.

Capone cited as a second ground for asking the review that certain counts in the indictment had been held by the lower courts to set up an offense against the United States when they did not allege that he had failed to pay taxes. This, he asserted, had failed to bring him within the statute he was charged with violating.

SENTENCED TO 11 YEARS

Capone was sentenced to ten years at the Leavenworth penitentiary and an additional term of one year in the county jail following his conviction on the charge of violating the federal income tax law.

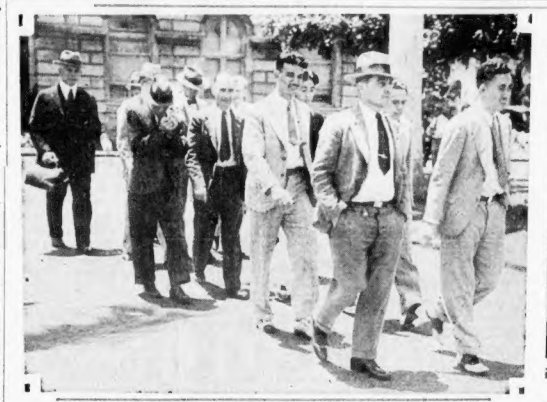
The grounds for the prosecution were based on the chage that he had evaded the federal taxes by failing to report income received from various underground sources.

The Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals stayed his commitment to the penitentiary and permitted him to remain in the jail at Chicago where he has been since his conviction in the Federal District Court.

WOULD STAY IN JAIL.

It provided, however, that the stay should be limited to thirty days which was considered sufficient to permit him to prepare and file in the supreme court here a petition for review.

The fact that the petition was filed today will be used as the basis for asking that the mandate be further held up and that Capone be permitted to remain in the Chicago jail until the supreme court can have an opportunity to pass on his petition and decide whether it will grant a review.



JURORS IN "HONOR" TRIAL LEAVE COURT

This shows jurors in the honor death trial leaving court after one of the early sessions at Honolulu courthouse. The jurymen are shown in custody of bailiffs on their way to the hotel in which they are quartered during the trial. They have been under this restraint now for 15 days and today's dispatches say have begun to show signs of unrest and impatience. It is hoped the trial will end next week. DARROW ON OUTING BETWEEN COURT SESSIONS

Outrigger canoe trips in Hawaiian waters is one of the relaxations enjoyed between court sessions by Clarence Darrow, famous Chicago attorney, who is chief of defense counsel fighting for acquittal of Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, his mother-in-law, Mrs. Grace Hubbard Fortescue, and two naval enlisted men in trial in Honolulu for the slaying of Joseph Kahahawai, alleged leader of gang of five that attacked and beat Massie's wife.

LONG CONFABS IN SOURLAND RESIDENCE

Lights Shine Out and Much Activity Manifested After Arrival of Strangers

Hopewell, N. J., April 22—Having returned from a mysterious two-day trip, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh conferred today with persons aiding him in attempts to get his kidnaped son back.

The flying colonel drove into his Sourland Mountain home about midnight.

Immediately lights shone from many windows in the house and activity was apparent.

Shortly before Lindbergh returned a car identified as that of Mrs. Dwight Morrow, his mother-in-law, discharged a woman passenger at his home.

THREE MEN ARRIVE

After the colonel's return an automobile owned by Edmund Bruce of Elmira, friend of John H. Curtis of Norfolk, drove into the estate. Witnesses said the driver resembled Bruce. Two men were in the rear seat.

A new development was expected with a visit to the Lindbergh home by the Rev. H. Dobson-Peacock.

The dean, one of the trio of Norfolk, Va., men acting as intermediaries for Lindbergh in attempted negotiations with the abductors, was reported in New York today, but due at the Lindbergh home later.

Flying under an assumed name, "H. Pearson" he arrived by plane from Washington at Newark, N. J., airport last night.

He said he wanted to lose himself in New York for a few hours to follow a trail that gave hope of leading to the kidnapers' hideaway, or contact with one of their agents.

CURTIS AWAY FROM HOME.

Whether the dean's associate, John H. Curtis, wealthy boat builder, was in New York was doubtful, but in Norfolk he was reported to have been absent for several days.

The third member of the Norfolk negotiators is Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage.

Police of New Rochelle, N. Y., sent what they considered a promising clue to New Jersey State police. It consisted of a set of torn proofs of photographs of a child resembling the Lindbergh baby. They were found on the floor of a New Rochelle restaurant, where a man and woman had dropped them after a quarrel.

Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., was born 22 months ago today. He was kidnaped on March 1.

Scotland Yard, the super-detective headquarters of Great Britain, today announced that a further check-up of Betty Gow, the nursemaid, and of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Whately, butler and cook in the Lindbergh household, showed the trio to have had "fine records" in England.

CHEMIST DIES IN JUNGLE

Chicago, April 22 (AP)—The tragic death of a young Chicago chemist in the jungle of Ecuador last January was revealed here today in a letter sent his parents by a companion who barely survived.

The letter told Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Walsh their son, Thomas, Jr., a University of Illinois graduate, succumbed to starvation and probably tropical fever and was buried by the writer, Harold Foard of West Virginia, in the jungle. They were searching for valuable ore.

Foard's message, mailed from Monzon, Peru, March 12, said three weeks after they left Lima, Peru, their specially built boat was wrecked on the Maranon river. They managed to save only a rifle and a few cartridges from their supplies.

Rarely able to sustain life on game they shot and fruits and herbs, they pushed afoot to the region of the Paute river, a vast jungle inhabited only by Indians. There Walsh died Jan. 29. A friend by native helped Foard reach Monzon.

Mr. and Mrs. Walsh are attempting to communicate with the American consul at Lima to learn whether the body could be brought to Chicago for burial.

On the expedition Walsh had planned to gather data for a doctor's degree. For two years after his graduation from Illinois in 1929 he was stationed at Oroya, Peru, as a chemist for a copper corporation.

Massie Faces Hard Test by Prosecution Alienists

By JAMES ADAM
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Honolulu, T. H., April 22 (INS)—Fighting desperately for a clearcut conviction despite the well laid defense of Atty. Clarence Darrow, Prosecutor John C. Kelley today mapped his final battle plans in the Fortescue-Massie "honor slaying" trial, aided by two mainland psychiatrists of renown.

A recess until Saturday was granted by Judge Charles S. Davis to permit Kelley and his two alienists, Dr. Paul Bowers and Dr. Joseph Catton, to study the transcript of testimony and to apply the final tests for the state on the mental condition of Massie.

Darrow has contended a culmination of harrowing events caused Lieut. Thomas H. Massie to become insane when Joseph Kahahawai purportedly admitted having attacked Mrs. Massie.

DARROW'S CONTENTION

Lieut. Massie, his mother-in-law, Mrs. Grace Hubbard Fortescue, and two naval enlisted men, Albert S. Jones and E. J. Lord, are accused of second degree murder of Kahahawai, the defense resting its entire case on the contention Lieut. Massie was temporarily deranged at the time of the shooting.

Dr. Catton and Dr. Bowers arrived from the mainland yesterday. Dr. Edward Huntington Williams, defense alienist who testified to the insanity of the young naval officer, returns to the mainland today, but Dr. Thomas J. Orbison will remain at Darrow's side until the end of the trial.

Through the rebuttal testimony, Kelley hopes to emphasize two contentions—either that Lieut. Massie faked an attack of insanity, or if he did become insane it was subsequent to the shooting.

Darrow meanwhile was reported studying with keen interest statements attributed to Dr. Catton before he left the mainland. The State's alienist was reported to have made a speech in San Francisco in which he strongly indicated that he believed Lieut. Massie to be insane. How this will fit into the State's case was a matter of conjecture.

The jury has been locked up for 15 days and already has begun to show signs of restlessness.

Kelley is planning to place only four rebuttal witnesses on the stand—Drs. Catton and Bowers and Dr. Robert Faus, local psychiatrist, together with Miss Maupana Peters.

Miss Peters, a stenographer in the city attorney's office, will testify that Lieut. Massie's actions appeared normal when she saw him immediately after his arrest.

8 ROADS HIT BY DOCK STRIKE

New York, April 22 (AP)—The longshoremen's strike in protest against wage reductions by three operators of coastwise ships spread to the piers of eight railroads today.

Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's Association, in stopping work at the deep sea piers of the railroads, charged that roads had violated an embargo agreed to earlier in the week by permitting their lighters to make deliveries to the coastwise piers, where the strike has been in progress.

The roads affected are the New York Central, the Central Railroad of New Jersey, the Pennsylvania, New York, New Haven & Hartford, Lehigh Valley, Baltimore & Ohio, Delaware, Lakawanna & Western and the New England Navigation Co.

BOYS BANNED IN FIRE HOUSES

As the result of the sounding of three false alarms from the fire station at Cross and Park sts., Chelsea, on Wednesday night while members of the company from this station were fighting a dump fire, drastic action has been taken by Mayor Quigley.

Under an order issued by the mayor and effective immediately no person other than a member of the fire department is to be allowed inside Chelsea fire houses.

He also transferred Capt. George Boylano of Engine 3 on Everett ave. to the the station on Park st. and transferred Lieut. John Barrows from Park st. to Engine 5.

Complaints had been made that the Park st. engine house had been the rendezvous for a crowd of youths. The police and fire officials say that one of these youths during the absence of the engine company used a private fire department line to send in three false alarms within a half an hour.

Death in Wake of Yucatan Cyclone

Merida, Yucatan, April 22 (INS)—A cyclone swept over Yucatan today, leaving death, destruction and scores of injured in its wake.

Two hundred houses were demolished in the vicinity of Merida. Telegraph lines were torn down obstructing railway tracks and cutting communication. At Tekak, Talbek, Oxkutzcab and Akil the storm was reported to be the severest.

JACOBY TO WED TENNIS STAR

Dallas, Tex., April 22 (AP)—The engagement of Oswald Jacoby, of New York, nationally known bridge expert, and Miss Mary Zita McHale of Dallas, was announced today by the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James A. McHale. The engagement followed a five-day romance. The wedding will be April 25.

Jacoby arrived last Sunday to lecture on contract bridge. In the afternoon at the Dallas Lawn Tennis Club he saw Miss McHale on an opposite court and later met her.

Miss McHale is national public park women's singles tennis champion.

Jacoby, a graduate of Columbia University, is a member of the famous "Four Horsemen," contract bridge team.

$10,000 WILLED TO TECHNOLOGY

New York, April 22 (AP)—Twelve public institutions received the bulk of the estate of undetermined value left by Mrs. Josephine L. Hanna, widow of Robert Milholland Hanna, under the terms of her will filed today. Mrs. Hanna, a resident of New York and Boston, died April 9.

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology receives the largest specific bequest, $10,000. Other bequests to public institutions included $5000 each to the Industrial School for Crippled and Deformed Children and the Children's Hospital, both of Boston; Rosary Hill Home, Hawthorne, N. Y., and $2000 to the Massachusetts Home for Needy, Worthy Women, Boston.

The personal legacies include $4000 to a cousin, Josephine Hausding, Hyde Park, Mass.

30 PUPILS HURT IN BUS, 2 DYING

St. Clairsville, O., April 22 (AP)—Thirty high school students from Fairview were injured, two probably fatally, early today when a bus collided with another automobile and overturned.

Betty Ironald, 17, sustained a broken back and Elizabeth Reed, 16, was internally hurt. The others were bruised and cut.

All are pupils at the Oxford High School at Fairview.

Heads Cracked as N. Y. Reds Riot

New York, April 22 (UR)—Three policemen were hurt, at least a dozen persons were injured under a thumping of police clubs and a charge of police horses, and nine men were arrested in a demonstration of Communists and jobless at City Hall.

There were 2000 in the crowd, police estimated. The disorder started when a police horse stepped on the foot of a police sergeant. As the sergeant stepped back a demonstrator aimed a blow at him.

Cruel Treatment Alleged by Wife

Salem, April 22—After their baby was born, her husband, Andrew L. Charron of Swampscott, beat her and knocked her down to such an extent that she was compelled to leave him, Mrs. Eva B. Charron of Peabody told Judge Harry R. Dow in court here, in seeking a divorce on the grounds of cruelty. Judge Dow reserved decision.

3 WIVES SNIP TIE, ONE FROM CHINESE

The ears of three husbands must have burned today somewhere when three wives, one of them the white wife of a Chinese, told their stories in Probate Court before Judge Joseph R. McCoole, and won their divorces.

Too much interference by in-laws was cited by Mrs. Miriam V. Brickman of Morrow st., Roxbury, pretty, 18-year-old bride of less than a year, as the chief cause of her troubles with Abraham Brickman, 20.

She was granted a divorce on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment and was given the right to resume her maiden name of Gordon.

When she married Abraham, she testified, he was a college student and had never been away from home in Tisbury except to go to school. They went to live in Tisbury, where his father is the wealthy owner of a store, and trouble started immediately, she declared, over the dictation of her father-in-law and mother-in-law.

10-HOUR HONEYMOON

The climax came, it was testified, when Abraham slapped her face, declaring he had been told by his father to put his foot down and show her who was boss.

Mrs. Bertha L. Mee of Albany st., South End, blonde wife of Sam Mee, now of Tyler st., Chinatown, had but 10 hours of married life with Sam. They were married, she testified, in July, 1925, at Newark, N. J., and stopped at a hotel in Delancey st., near New York's Chinatown.

Ten hours after the ceremony, Sam packed his clothes, said he was "all through," and departed. She had not seen him since and she charged desertion.

CHARGES CRUELTIES

Cruel and abusive treatment was charged by Helen S. Clair Guzman of Revere, against Lope Guzman, whom she married in Denver, Colo., in January, 1928.

They moved to Charlestown, where she had him arrested in December, 1929, on a charge of assault. He was found guilty, she charged. The wife recited a long train of alleged cruelties.

OFFICER IS SUED BY VICTIM OF HIS GUN

How he entertained two girls and was later shot three times by a policeman in Holyoke as he stood beside his auto on April 2, 1931, was told to Judge McLellan and a jury in federal court today by Albert J. Whyte of Springfield, a British subject.

He was testifying at the trial of his $50,000 damage suit against Patrolman Raymond S. Loudon of Holyoke for injuries received from a revolver alleged to have been used by him the night of the shooting. Loudon's allegation is he was chasing robbers.

"I drove the girls around town and stopped at a store to buy some cigarettes while they remained in the car," testified Whyte. "I also bought some chewing gum for the girls. I then drove half way from Holyoke to Springfield and returned. It was a warm night. I did not wear my overcoat.

"After leaving the girls at their home I stopped the car in Hillside ave. to put on my coat. As I did so I was shot three times, once in the left arm and twice in the hand."

STUDENT RIOT CALLED PRANK; ALL CASES ARE PUT OVER

other students, and most of the policemen who were hurt were clubbed or gassed by other policemen.

The five-hour riot, which surged about Harvard sq. from 8 o'clock last evening until 1 o'clock this morning, accompanied by destruction of public and private property and police activities of the musical comedy variety, had its anti-climax, both serious and humorous, today.

BRAZEN CHALLENGE

Dist. Atty. Bishop described it as a "brazen challenge to constituted authority."

"The riot last night was a most disgraceful affair," he said, "and I have requested Chief McBride, in whom I have the utmost confidence, to give me a full report. I intend to make a sweeping investigation and present the entire matter to the grand jury.

"I shall not tolerate such happenings wherein the lives and safety of innocent people are placed in jeopardy.

"The riot, uncalled for and without a scintilla of justification, was a direct assault upon society and a brazen challenge to constituted authority. I shall stand no more of it."

RUSSELL ANGERED.

Another serious note was sounded by Mayor Russell himself a witness to the riot in its final stages, who summoned Chief McBride into conference and then made an appointment to lay the city's official protest before President Lowell.

"I shall say that Cambridge will no longer tolerate riots such as occurred last night," the mayor stated. "In the future drastic action on the part of the police and not 'mere admonition' will be used."

He had no direct criticism of police ineffectiveness last night, although he added: "The riot should have been nipped at its inception and not allowed to go on, even if the entire police force was used."

The mayor arrived on the scene after many of the 2000 rioters had been dispersed, but in time to witness the burning of the University Theater gate.

MANY POLICE ON HAND

The nine students and the three laborers who somehow became embroiled in the disturbance and were captured by the police, were arraigned this morning before Judge Stone in district court.

Most of them had been bailed during the night and presented an immaculate appearance; the few who spent the night in a cell wore whiskers and wrinkled suits.

Staunchly barring the door after the cow had been kidnaped, police had a large detail on hand at the courthouse in anticipation of another disturbance, but there wasn't even the semblance of one in the making.

All of the students pleaded not guilty, they were advised to do so by Judge Stone. The most serious charge was lodged against Nelson Aldrich, 21, a sophomore, and son of the president of the Chase National Bank, New York.

He was accused of assault on an officer as well as disturbing the peace.

The others arraigned were Donald J. Anderson, a freshman; Marlin Johnston, 18, a freshman; Thomas Balmer, freshman; Daniel F. Nugent, Jr., sophomore; Lewis J. DeBlois, Jr., freshman; William G. Ebbing, 20; Gray Edward, 20; Daniel W. Loeser, 23, Law School student, and the three laborers, Fred Marrazzo, Albert Marabella and Frank Marabella.

There was a bench conference between Judge Stone and counsel for the students after which court said:

"Of course I have read the morning papers. I am not blind to the day's news. So we will have all of these defendants here and try them all the same day so that everybody can be heard."

He then suggested May 11 as Aldrich said that was an examination day. He then suggested May 24. Another student said that was an examination day for him. Finally it was decided that all except Loeser should be heard on May 24. Loeser said May 2 would be all right with him.

After the hearing, Loeser and Martin D. Iroveno, another student, who had been arrested, allegedly drunk, during the riot, but released without appearance in court, went to the office of Dist. Atty. Bishop.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Volpe was also present when the students announced they wished to make complaint about the "brutality of police." They named Patrolmen McLaughlin and Helsey.

"I told them they better go home and 'sleep it off,'" Volpe said. "They both admitted they had 'hang-overs.'"

Bishop added: "They ought to beat up some more of the participants."

Chief McBride and Capt. Brennan, his acting chief, viewed the evening's proceedings in different lights. The chief said:

"It is about time Cambridge policemen were given more respect by these hoodlums. Clubbing was the only thing the police could have done last night. If they used their clubs more and if the courts dealt out stiff sentences to these rioters, more respect would be had for the law.

"This was the worst exhibition of hoodlumism that I have ever seen in my experience, and it was disgraceful both to the city and to the college."

For himself, he said, he didn't plan to confer with any college authorities. "They never did anything in the past about these affairs. I think jail for the guilty ones would be a good example."

Capt. Brennan, who was the acting chief on the scene, cautioned his officers against the use of clubs and, though they asked him for tear gas bombs and riot guns to quell the disturbers, he would not permit their use. The gas bombs finally used (with disastrous effects to the users) were taken to the scene without his permission.

"HARVARD TRADITION"

"Why," said he at the height of the festivities(?) while hen fruit and decayed vegetable matter and rocks were flying and the Brattle sq. station was in danger of being capsized by the rioters storming in free (how who had been arrested, "why, the boys are just having a little fun. When members of the Harvard alumni read about this in the paper they'll say, 'Oh boy, Harvard tradition.'"

Strolling nonchalantly among the rioters, he placidly remarked to newspapermen: "They're having quite a bit of fun, aren't they?"

His uniformed workers were at that time being roughly manhandled, trolleys were being pulled off wires, buses were being rocked like little boats on their springs, all traffic was demoralized and the only thing needed to complete the "fun" was a small boy with a pea shooter.

Harvard officials met in a conference this morning with Dean Hanford presiding. Present were Maj. Apted, Regent Matthew Luce and Assistant Dean Bender, who received the "poke" from the gendarme.

PROMISES "ACTION"

When the conference broke up, Dean Hanford said a full investigation would be made, aimed at those responsible for the riot, and that action would be taken. He did not say what action.

Apted apparently found consolation in his opinion the University Theater battle in 1926 "was more serious than last night's affair."

Dean Bender said the incident surrounding the assault upon him by a policeman had been misrepresented.

"I was coming home from the theater," he said, "and I saw a half-dozen people I knew returning to their rooms, so I joined them. A group of policemen approached and told us to hurry along. They hurried me a little too much, so I turned around and handed one of them my card—and he took a poke at me. It was not a hard blow, so I did not see fit to argue. I returned home."

Lieut. John E. Winslow, an old Indian fighter, had his hat stolen during the melee and Patrolman Edward Donovan had his hat and badge removed.

There is no doubt but that the police could have taken control of the situation immediately after it started had they not been afraid of using violence and so offending Harvard. This is a lesson which has been drilled into them over a period of many years. "Go easy on the Harvard boys."

When finally they were obliged to use violence or else see the whole Harvard sq. area taken over by the rioters, they began getting into one another's way and concentrating on non-offenders.

One of those seized by police was A. L. Putnam, consultant on careers at the university. Unlike Bender, he escaped without a punch on the nose but chiefly because he was recognized by Apted, who went to his rescue.

"YOUTHFUL EXUBERANCE"

There were no very serious injuries. Special Officer Joseph P. Breen was burned by a tear gas bomb. Patrolmen Roger O'Brien and John Tevlin got lumps on their heads; so did many students.

The exact cause of the riot is probably as much a mystery to the rioters as it is to anyone else. The Radcliffe girls said through their press bureau today that it was traceable to "youthful exuberance" and that to about as close, probably as anyone will come.

Bertram Hall, a Radcliffe dormitory, was invaded by a group of freshmen early in the evening. They were shouting, "Apted for president." "We want beer." "We want our bell-clapper."

Some, apparently, already had had their beer. They stole from the girls' dorm a bell clapper similar to that which was taken from Memorial Hall 1' days ago and they rushed out proclaiming they had recovered the Memorial Hall clapper.

GRAY EDWARDS DANIEL LOESER

Two of the nine Harvard students arraigned and released without bail today for a continued hearing May 24 in connection with last night's rioting in Harvard sq. They are shown leaving East Cambridge District Court. Gray Edwards of Newburgh, N. Y., is charged with loitering, and Daniel Loeser of Cleveland, O., is charged with attempting to rescue a prisoner. VALERA'S AGED MOTHER ILL

Rochester, N. Y., April 22 (INS)—The mother of Ireland's greatest living patriot lies ill here today.

Mrs. Catherine Wheelwright, 80-year-old mother of Eamonn De Valera, president of the executive council of the Irish Free State, has not been able to follow the activities of her famous son since he was swept into power some weeks ago.

Even mention of his name today brings such emotion that she shakes her head, tearfully, and remains silent. The peak of his 16-year struggle has been reached, and the magnitude of his victory has overcome her.

Quick-witted, spirited, the source of De Valera's own fiery personality, Mrs. Wheelwright has been ill ever since the news of her son's election reached her. Perhaps the two things had no connection, says her physician, Dr. Katherine L. Daly, but there is the possibility that her pride and joy and concern for her son's welfare were too much for her ageing heart.

WATCH THE HOLES GROW

Free Cool Beer for the Mourners

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 22 (AP)—Urchins need no longer fear an attack from the rear (or the front, either) as they squirm through the hole in the fence to see the Clarksburg baseball team play. Official holes, just big enough to admit "Skinny" and "Midge" free, have been ordered cut in the fence by the club management.

Perth, Australia, April 22 (AP)—There wasn't a dry lip in the house as mourners bemoaned the passing of John Jones, civil servant. Following instructions in his will, each mourner received two of the largest and coolest glasses of beer in Australia.

New York, April 22 (AP)—"You were a great help—I don't think," said Miss Frances Maddux, night club singer, to Tommy, her terrier, as she picked herself out of the dust. A woman had snatched Miss Maddux's pocketbook and dashed off. As the singer started in pursuit Tommy, thinking it a lark, tangled himself all up in her feet and she fell headlong.

Santa Rosa, Cal., April 22 (AP)—Not that he thinks it's timely or anything, but John Bulla, bybridizer, has announced he is growing a blue rose.

Jury Box Reshaped for 400-Pound Man

Providence, R. I., April 23 (INS)—Attendants at the new $2,000,000 courthouse were amazed today when Walter V. Kennedy was chosen as a juror.

He weighs 400 pounds and attaches rearranged the seats in the jury box and obtained a special chair. He came to court in a truck.

D. A. R. Score Naval Cut

Washington, April 22 (AP)—A resolution deploring "efforts now being made in Congress" to reduce national defense appropriations, "especially as regards the navy," was adopted today by the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Mitchell, Big Ship Executive, Stricken

New York, April 22 (AP)—Percy V. G. Mitchell, 54, vice-president of the International Mercantile Marine, the White Star Line and the Roosevelt Steamship Lines, suffered a heart attack in his office today and was taken to Broad St. Hospital.

Two Men Injured in Fall Off Truck

Two Malden men, William Castanza of Central ave. ext., and Alan J. MacDonald of Broadway, were injured in Forest st., East city, late yesterday when they fell from the rear of a one-ton truck in the center of this town.

COSGRAVE WILL FIGHT FOR OATH

Dublin, Irish Free State, April 22 (AP)—Leaders of former President Cosgrave's party served notice today of their opposition to the Fianna Fail bill abolishing the oath of allegiance to the British crown.

They filed an amendment to the bill, asserting it placed in jeopardy the rights, liberties, economic privileges and freedom assured to the Irish people by the treaty of 1921. They stated also that when the bill comes up for second reading on Wednesday they will oppose it, pending negotiations and an agreement between the Free State and the British governments.

The text of the Government's bill, published today, provides for deletion of Article 17 from the constitution. The bill also calls for repeal of a consequential amendment of Section 2 of the Free State act of 1922. Another clause provides the Free State Parliament shall retain power, after a referendum, to amend the constitution, but not within the terms of the treaty.

$5000 Fire in Home of Concord Elks

Concord, April 22—Fire, for which two alarms were sounded, calling aid from West Concord, caused $5000 loss today in the three-story brick block at 3, 5 and 7 Main st., in the center of this town.

Empty Envelopes to Be Welcomed in Roxbury Church

Believing that some of the flock were staying away from church because they did not have money to put in the collection, Rev. James G. Lane, pastor, and the board of the Washington Boulevard M. E. Church, West Roxbury, announced a new system today.

All will be given envelopes for a monthly donation, and if they want to put the envelopes in the box empty nobody will be the wiser.

ASKS 4 MILLION FOR R. I. IDLE

Providence, R. I., April 22 (AP)—In the presence of 100 or more bankers, clergymen, directors of public aid and other welfare workers, gathered to discuss unemployment relief, Henry T. Sampson, designated by Gov. Case as chairman, today declared at least $4,000,000 will have to be made available to care for the state's unemployed in 1933.

Samson is secretary of the committee charged with distribution of loans from the treasury to the municipalities and his statement was based on a survey. He estimated that 1933 might find recipients of public aid in Rhode Island increased from 40,000 to 75,000.

URGES CASHING OF BONUS NOW

Washington, April 22 (AP)—Legislation to allow veterans to cash bonus certificates at their present value was urged before the House ways and means committee today by Rep. Lea of California.

"I am opposed to full cash payment of the face value of the certificates," he said.

The plan for full payment on the 1945 cash value of the certificates advocated by Rep. Patman is estimated to cost $2,490,000,000.

The average bonus certificate would reach its full face value of $1000 in 1945. The present value of such a certificate is $542. It is this sum Lea would permit veterans to obtain if they wished to do so.

"The Patman bill," Lea said, "would cause the government to spend now $1,353,000,000 more than it owes.

"My proposition is to pay the service men everything we owe him today.

"If we are going to administer relief on the ground of need, shall there be any distinction, any discrimination?"

Stimson, Ill, Calls Off Engagements

Geneva, April 22 (AP)—Henry L. Stimson, American Secretary of State, has cancelled all engagements for several days until he recovers from a slight attack of laryngitis.

VICTORY SEEN BY CURLEY

city employe should welcome an opportunity to get even with the mayor for that reason. We have not discharged anybody. Frankly, if I was a city employe, other than the mayor, I would welcome the opportunity to take off my coat and roll up for Roosevelt the biggest majority ever recorded and I believe the city employes are going to do it."

To the independents, those not enrolled in either party, the mayor issued the statement that in an industrial war there are no noncombatants. He asserted that the time has come when the independents can't afford any longer to sit on the sidelines.

"Everybody is a part of the battle," he stated. "The Republican stomach is just as sacred to the Republican as the Democratic stomach is to the Democrat. One can be just as hungry as the other.

"Get off the sidelines. Go to the polls on Tuesday and don't let a little selfish group interested in the stop-Roosevelt movement prevent the nomination of a man who can and will lend us to a brighter and a better day in America."

CITES JOB SITUATION

Any doubt existing in the mind of any individual as to the seriousness of the present situation, the mayor pointed out, has only to read the page ads put out by the Job-Finding Committee in Boston calling on everyone to hire at least one man to do odd work around the house.

"What are they going to do for the rest of the year?" the Mayor asked. "There isn't anything in sight of a constructive character."

The mayor took a fling at "that class of economists known as the 'hair-splitters'." In Syracuse, he declared, they have so devised the method of distributing aid as to bring it down to 3 cents a meal.

In the Syracuse diet, he revealed further, there is no meat and but one egg for the family.

"That egg would be hard boiled (laughter) and ground up and put on some vegetables so that everybody would have some of the egg," he said.

In Philadelphia, he continued, the situation has reached such a pass that they have a waiting list.

DOLE HERE, HE SAYS

"And God only knows," he commented, "when the last of that list is going to be reached. And they tell you we have no dole."

The mayor contended that the dole system has been in existence for the last three years. He held that more money is being spent in this country under the dole today than Great Britain spent prior to 1930.

"Great Britain spent from 1920 to 1930 an average of $200,000,000 a year," he disclosed. "We are spending fully as much as that with a population of less than 1,000,000 in Boston."

"If it costs Boston the coming year $15,000,000, and there is every indication that it will, then the dole in America will be the equivalent of $1,500,000,000 as against $200,000,000 in Great Britain."

The pity of the situation, he said, is that the huge sums being spent in this manner leave no tangible return to succeeding generations. And a cut in the dole, he added, will put a greater burden on those to come in an impoverished mankind, a toll that must be discharged through hospitalization and a weakened human family in succeeding years.

The announcement of a "dripping wet" rally to be held on Boston Common tomorrow at 1 p. m., by the mayor in the North End rally, brought forth salvos of cheers from residents of that section of the city.

In pounding home his argument that the cure for depression is work and wages, the Mayor pointed out that practically every great construction job put in operation in the history of the world was for the purpose of keeping men at work during a slump. Yet, he said, they tell us the nation can't be legislated into prosperity by bonding public works.

Here in this country, he said, not a single dollar is recommended by the President or Congress for this purpose. And in Massachusetts, he stated, Governor Ely refused to allow him to spend any money despite the fact that he had asked for $28,000,000, to be used for projects to provide employment.

At South Boston, where an overflow audience listened in at the amplifier and where he received an ovation, the Mayor said that he had been cautioned that he might not receive a friendly reception. He said that he might look for coldness from a section where he was unknown and which he had treated ungenerously but not from South Boston.

He characterized South Boston as one place "which bristles with monuments to the affection of James M. Curley."

SMITH 'CANNED' TALK ON AIR TOMORROW

Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York has gone in for "canned oratory" in his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination, Democratic leaders disclosed here today.

Phonograph records ofr broadcast purposes have been prepared for use tomorrow night throughout the country, they said.

J. Frank Donohue, chairman of the state committee, a leader of the Smith forces, was still confined to his home through illness, but members of his staff told of the plan.

HITS CURLEY SPENDING

A noon-day rally for Smith in front of Pemberton sq. courthouse became an attack on Mayor Curley, leader of the Massachusetts Roosevelt forces.

City Councillor Clement A. Norton of Hyde Park was the principal speaker.

"The youngest child in Boston today will not live long enough to pay the bills contracted by Curley," Norton charged.

He referred to the Hawkins st. work yard of the public welfare department as the "House of Horrors" and said the people should demand a system of poor relief other than one that requires applicants to make the long trip to the city.

BIG RALLIES TONIGHT

With Representatives Joseph A. Logan of Hyde Park and John J. Reardon of South Boston, Norton urged his audience to follow the leadership of Senator Walsh, Governor Ely and former Governor Smith.

The entire force of the Smith camp will swing into action tonight for the final offensive. Senators Walsh and Coolidge, Governor Ely, former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald and four congressmen will visit nine cities and four sections of Boston. They will appear in Lowell, Lawrence, Haverhill, Peabody, Salem, Lynn, Marlboro, Waltham, Chelsea, Dorchester, Brighton, Hyde Park and Charlestown.

CROWDS CHEER 'RIOT' POLICE

Several thousand persons witnessed and cheered a spectacular exhibition of riot work by 150 police, before Commissioner Hultman, Supt. Crowley and military officers on the Common this afternoon.

The show is an annual affair, theoretically in preparation for May Day, when radical outbreaks often occur. Capt. Lutz and Lieut. Bernard Graham were in charge.

Riot guns, rifles, sub-machine guns and gas bombs were called into play, brank cartridges being used.

The srow opened with a cavalry charge by 20 mounted officers swinging nightsticks. Then a smoke screen was laid down and the other troops followed it across the field, with rifle and machine gun men on the flanks to pick off snipers.

There was a review by the commissioner and as this was ending, Capt. Perley Skillings of Station 16, Rock Bay, put the department to a test by pulling a citizen's alarm at Boylston and Charles st.

Although there were few reserve men because of the maneuvers, nevertheless within a few minutes three police cars arrived on the scene, each carrying several officers, and these were augmented by traffic men, inspectors and other plain clothes men.

Y. M. C. A. Campaign Fund Now $22,682

The Boston Y. M., C. A. budget balancing campaign organization at its third report meeting this noon at the Chamber of Commerce reported $4,219.50, bringing the grand total to $22,682.

This represents 31.5 per cent of the five-division quota of $72,000 which is a part of the total campaign goal of $115,730.

COMING To End RUPTURE Troubles

Representatives of W. S. Rice, Adams, N. Y., originator of the Rice Method for self-treatment of rupture at home, with physician registered in the state of Massachusetts, will be at the Brunswick Hotel, corner Boylston and Clarendon sts., Boston, Mass., Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, April 25, 26, 27 and 28, to give a personal and free trial of his method to all sufferers who want to end rupture trouble and truss wearing.

No matter how bad the rupture, how long you have had it, or how hard to hold, no matter how many kinds of trusses you have worn, let nothing prevent you from getting this FREE TRIAL. Whether you are tall and thin, short and stout, have a large abdomen, whether you think you are past help or have a rupture as large as your fists, this marvelous Method will so control and keep it up inside as to surprise you. It will so reinforce the parts where the rupture comes through that soon you will be as free to work at any occupation as though you had never been ruptured.

For the lady casters a woman expert, thoroughly trained, will assist in the demonstrations in private apartments. The trial will be absolutely complete and thorough without a penny of cost. You owe it to your personal comfort and safety not to miss the great free demonstration. It is a real opportunity to learn how you may be done with chafing trusses and the danger, suffering and trouble your rupture has caused.

The hours are 9 to 12 a. m., 2 to 5 p. m. and evenings 7 to 9. Remember the dates and place, Brunswick Hotel, corner Boylston and Clarendon sts., Boston, Mass., Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, April 25, 26, 27 and 28.

Police Riot Squad, Shielded by Smoke Screen, Go Through Their Paces in Maneuvers on Common

COM. HULTMAN SUPT. CROWLEY COL. SPENCER

Commissioner Hultman, Supt. Crowley and Lieut.-Col. Harry L. Spencer of the First Corps Cadets watch the exhibition.

Use of tear gas bombs, tear gas guns, sub-machine guns and other equipment was demonstrated in striking fashion on the Common today by the Boston police riot squad while a big crowd watched. Officials of city and State and guests from other police departments viewed the drill, which was in charge of Capt. Louis Lutz, department drill master. There were several novel features in the exhibition. The squad, led by Sergt. Edward Kelley, is shown advancing through a smoke screen for an attack on an imaginary mob. (Staff photo.)

Policemen Save His Skin and It Jails Him

Chicago, April 22 (AP)—Roy Carter lost his freedom because Evanston's scientific police saved his skin. Investigating a burglary, police found the robber had skinned his hand on a window sill. The fragment was preserved in alcohol. When Carter was arrested the patch of skin matched a scar on his hand.

LLOYD GEORGE SEES GERMANY'S GUILT IN PERSPECTIVE

By GILBERT SELDES

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE is, I believe, the first man who ever became Prime Minister in England as a result of clamor in the newspapers. In so far as he helped Great Britain win the war

GILBERT SELDES

—and just to the extent that Great Britain is glad of having won the war—the country may be grateful to its press. In August, 1914, an American correspondent was thrown out of 10 Downing Street by Mr. Asquith's butler because he asked too many questions and because Asquith had been brought up in the tradition of despising the newspapers. In 1917, Asquith was more graciously ushered out of 10 Downing Street and Lloyd George, who worked with the press and appealed to the press, and was, in turn, influenced by the press, became Prime Minister.

"Dangerous Man"

When I first came to England in 1916 I was unprepared for Lloyd George's reputation. I knew he had existed before the war, but in my mind he was only the man who, with Lord Northcliffe's assistance, had flung aside the hide-bound experts and was creating the kind of shells which were needed at the front, instead of the kind that were used in the Boer War. People I knew in England still considered him a dangerous demagogue because of his system of taxing the great landed estates; they also admired him for his activity, but grudgingly.

The English are politically minded; they remember their statesmen. They contrasted the cool passion of Asquith's "we shall not sheathe the sword which we have not lightly drawn . . ." with Lloyd George's vulgar demand for "the knockout blow." Six months later, Lloyd George had kissed the King's hands in token of his new office. Many people suggested that at the last minute Lord Northcliffe had interposed his own hands to be kissed.

Explosive Book

As Prime Minister, Lloyd George went through blacker days than Asquith ever suffered, but there was no one strong enough to dislodge him. And on all his misfortunes were washed away by the sweet waters of victory, and by the time these waters had grown brackish, Lloyd George was out of office. He did, however, represent his country in making the treaty, and now he has summed up his case for the financial settlements in a book called "The Truth About Reparations and War Debts." I call it a book because it is printed on paper and bound in covers, but it goes back to the two offices Lloyd George held before he became Prime Minister. It is a financial report and a high explosive shell.

A Lay Preacher

Lloyd George is a Welsh preacher, fervent and inspired, and he needs some figures to keep himself in check. Without these figures he goes right back to the "hang the Kaiser" attitude of 1916. He says he will not argue the question of war guilt, and instantly accuses Austria and Germany of being alone guilty of starting the war. "The countries that deliberately plunge into that risk (of war) cannot complain if it goes against them." Reparations can be collected because Germany was defeated; they are justified because Germany was guilty; and they are high because "the fees in the courts of war are all on the highest scale."

On the subject of Europe's debts to America, he says:

"If America hesitates today to crown her honourable mood of sacrifice for humanity in the war by relieving panting millions of Europe of a burden they agreed in the hour of their agony to carry for American freedom, it is not because the people of the great Republic are greedy, or grasping, or mean. It is because they are suspicious of Europe, and not without some reason."

Honourable . . . sacrifice . . . humanity . . . panting millions . . . burden . . . hour of their agony . . . These are all emotional words, the intention of which is to create again the mood of 1917.

Fact at Last

But the last sentence is fact, and Mr. Lloyd George is extremely good on what the fact implies. Again and again in this book he demands that France fulfill her obligations, under the treaty, to disarm, as Germany disarmed.

"Eleven years have elapsed since then, and French ministers are still arguing at Geneva whether they should carry out one-tenth of their treaty obligations in respect of disarmament."

I am omitting the central argument for suspension and cancellation because I am financially not competent to judge it. The minor points I have noted indicate the emotions behind the ideas. There is one more I might mention. Toward the end Lloyd George speaks of the rampageous nationalism now active in France and Japan and England and America. I wonder if he does not think that he himself may be partly responsible.

POLICE BLAMED FOR REVELS

Detroit, April 22 (INS)—Mrs. Lawrence J. Swindler, Civic Study Club leader, today declined an invitation from police officials to name "speakeasies" where she charged 15-year-old boys and girls carouse.

Addressing a club, Mrs. Swindler stated she and her husband visited several "blind pigs" where boys and girls were drinking. Police Commissioner James K. Watkins said the places would be closed if she would reveal their addresses.

"I have no doubt the police department has knowledge of every blind pig in the city," Mrs. Swindler declared. "That is what they are paid to know."

MISSING BEAUTY IS LOCATED

A search of more than two months in a number of cities in the east, ended today in Pittsburgh when Angelina Mastromarino, 15-year-old Swampscott beauty, was captured in a lodging house with a man she declared to be her husband.

The girl, a beauty prize winner of 1929, left home on February 13, taking with her, it is alleged, $3000 from a safe in her father's variety store in Swampscott.

A warrant was sworn out against her, charging larceny, and police of a number of cities joined in the hunt. Several weeks ago she was traced to Pittsburgh through a message home in which she said she was married and on the way back to Swampscott.

GIRL PLUNGES FROM WINDOW

Believing to be despondent as a result of illness, Miss Gladys Nelson, 27, of Central ave., Chelsea, either jumped or fell from a second floor window of her home early today.

At Chelsea Memorial Hospital she was found to be suffering from serious cuts and bruises.

The girl's screams attracted the attention of neighbors and police were notified. The girl was found crumpled on the lawn.

An investigation revealed that Miss Nelson has been ill.

Freshman Caps and Bibles Not Required

Storrs, Conn., April 22—Tradition has bowed to utility at Connecticut Agriculture College where the student senate voted yesterday that yearlings will no longer be required to purchase freshman caps and Bibles. The $500 spent annually for these will be used instead to establish a student loan fund.

CEREAL RELIEVED HIS CONSTIPATION

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Brought New Health

Every one who has suffered from constipation should read Mr. P. M. Fisher's letter:

"For many years I suffered from constipation and used, for relief, all kinds of laxatives. After a few days' treatment, I would only find my condition the same as before and at times worse.

"Some time ago I started to use Kellogg's ALL-BRAN regularly, once a day as directed. Since doing this, I have found that I do not need any other medicine to procure the desired result, and it keeps me in a very healthful condition."—Mr. P. M. Fisher, 352 Evergreen Place, Ridgewood, N. J.

Constipation is caused by lack of two things in the diet: "Bulk" to exercise the intestines; Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN supplies both—and also iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in lettuce. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears out the wastes.

How much safer this is than risking pills and drugs—so often harmful. Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily—in serious cases, with every meal. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved in this way, see your doctor.

Equally tasty as a cereal, or used in cooking. Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

CITES COLLEGE SPREES OF '90'S

New York, April 22 (INS)—Frequent assertions that the younger generation of today indulges in liquor because prohibition has made it "smart" to drink in universities and at parties may be unfounded.

For no less an authority than Fred A. Victor, chairman of the New York State Anti-Saloon League, declared that before prohibition students drank much more.

"I can remember seeing a Yale-Princeton football game at Manhattan Field in the 90s," he told the New York State women's committee for law enforcement.

"The patrol wagons drove up and they loaded drunken college boys into them like loading cordwood on the farm."

Victor said the present crisis would have become a real disaster had not prohibition prevented people from spending four or five billion dollars on liquor.

Wife Blinds Husband Who Hung Around House and Nagged

Los Angeles, April 22 (AP)—A weird climax to the domestic unhappiness of Mrs. Rebecca Greenberg, 60, was written in police records today as hospital surgeons treated her husband, Morris, whom she blinded with acid as he slept.

"I had planned to do it for 30 years," the gray-haired little woman told police. "He stayed around the house too much and nagged at me."

Foe of Gold Standard Heads Bank of Greece

Athens, Greece, April 22 (AP)—Kriskos Varvaressos, councilor to the Bank of Greece, was appointed minister of finance today, succeeding G. Maris.

Some observers regarded this as significant in view of the fact that yesterday, when Premier Venizelos met the cabinet and a number of financiers and industrialists, Prof. Varvaressos advocated abandoning the gold standard.

CIRCUS HERE IN TEN DAYS

Circus time is only ten days away!

Coming direct from New York, Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey circus will inaugurate a week's engagement at Boston Garden on Monday night, May 2.

The opening night performance will be a benefit for the Children's Hospital.

Outstanding among the thrillers of the show is Clyde Beatty with his 40 lions and tigers.

There will also be Lucita Lees, beautiful and youthful aerialist; Alfredo Codona, the only aerialist in the world to accomplish a triple somersault in midair; the Flying Concellos; "Sky High," nine-foot, 350-pound cowboy from Texas; and Maximo, famous pantomimist.

Mayor Curley today gave his official indorsements to the circus plan to raise funds to carry on the work of the hospital.

The mayor took that action after purchasing a box for the performance from a committee consisting of his daughter, Miss Mary E. Curley, Mrs. Roger W. Cutler and Miss Dorothy Forbes.

SMILING CIRCUS BEAUTY

You'll see a woman who is an expert with horses when you spot Dorothy Herbert, at the big circus that comes to the Boston Garden on May 2.

JAPANESE HURL DEFI TO RUSSIA AND LEAGUE

Tokio, April 22 (AP)—A blunt warning to the League of Nations and Soviet Russia to keep hands off Manchuria was laid down today by Gen. Sadao Araki, Japanese minister of war.

The warning, made in a speech at Osaka before the Kokuhonsha Patriotic Society, later was informally endorsed in foreign office and in other government quarters.

"FAHADISE" PLANNED

Japan's mission, he said, was to make Manchuria a "paradise on earth, safe for everybody," and nothing the League or anybody else did could make Japan deviate from that course.

Asserting that Japan would resist resolutely any attempt by the League to apply the nine-power treaty, Araki then turned to Soviet Russia. He called attention to what he said was a threatening situation in north Manchuria, due to Russia's massing of troops on the frontier and strengthening her air force in the Far East.

"We are unable to understand what these war-like preparations mean," he said. "The situation is becoming serious. Russia is concentrating four divisions in Siberia on the Manchurian border. We can only wait and see whether the storm breaks."

CLERGY DRYEST IN DRY POLL

New York, April 22 (INS)—The clergy of the United States are the dryest of the professional groups, the lawyers the wettest, according to returns of the Literary Digest's special classified prohibition polls made public today.

Next in dry sentiment to the clergy ranks the bankers of the country, while physicians were almost as wet as the lawyers, analysis of the ballots showed.

The all class poll was taken in conjunction with the referendum of whether the prohibition law should be retained or repealed, in which 20,000,000 persons were asked to participate.

In response to ballots sent to clergymen of all denominations throughout the nation, 42,608 were returned. Of these, 23,924 were for continuance of prohibition, 19,684 for repeal.

In the 1930 poll of a like nature 57.09 per cent of the clergy was dry, as compared with the 54.86 per cent in the current canvass.

Bankers' ballots showed 26,608 or 34.17 per cent favored retention of the Eighteenth Amendment, while 51,252 or 65.38 per cent wanted it repealed.

The previous bankers' vote was 41.50 per cent for enforcement.

Doctors returned a total of 60,229 ballots, 14,770 or 24.52 per cent being dry, and 45,459 or 75.48 per cent wet.

Two years ago this group voted 30.34 per cent dry.

The lawyers, voting more than 3 to 1 for repeal, returned 12,736 or 24.23 per cent of the ballots marked for continuance of prohibition and 39,825 or 75.77 per cent marked for repeal.

In the preceding balloting members of this profession registered a 28.85 per cent vote for the dry side.

Bankruptcy Revision Declared Legal

Washington, April 22 (AP)—Lloyd K. Garrison, special assistant to Atty.-Gen. Mitchell, today told the joint congressional committee studying the Hastings bankruptcy revision bill he felt it was constitutional.

Robert A. B. Cook, of Boston, recently challenged constitutionality of the measure.

Fat Men!

Here's A Red Hot Tip

Safe Way to Get Rid of Surplus Fat and at the Same Time Gain in Vigor, Energy and Mental Activity—Feel Younger.

"Yes, Gentlemen," writes a man from Richmond Hill — "I have finished my second bottle of Kruschen Salts and have obtained the following results:

"I have removed 3 inches from the belt line—Get up in the morning feeling 100 per cent—I am 25 per cent more active—My mind is clearer—My wind has improved 25 per cent—All skin eruptions have disappeared—My face and lips have color —When I go to bed I am motionless —sleep like a brick. Am 46 years old and feel 10 years younger."

Millions of men the world over are taking the little daily dose of Kruschen because they know that it keeps them feeling fit and active—life really becomes a glorious adventure —well worth living.

Get on the scales today and see how much you weigh—then get a bottle of Kruschen Salts which costs but a trifle and will last 4 weeks. Take one-half teaspoonful in a glass of hot water every morning—cut down on sweets for a while—persist in this method every morning and when you have finished the contents of this first bottle weigh yourself again—and know that the six mineral salts of Kruschen have presented you with glorious health.

You will find it economical and SAFE; for why take Kruschen every morning—don't worry—it's the SAFE way to reduce.

But be sure for your health's sake that you ask for and get Kruschen Salts. Get them at any druggists in the world and if the results one bottle brings do not delight you—do not joyfully satisfy you—why money back.

EVER SO MANY OF BEACON HILL'S DELIGHTFUL ladies are in the South viewing the old-fashioned gardens of South Carolina and Georgia, and other remote places.

MRS. GEORGE L. BATCHELDER, JR.

We were so amused to read on the invitations which were received that accommodations for ladies' maids would be provided . . . now

Ladies' maids are as scarce in Boston as nightingales in London but the good old pioneer spirit of the "gardiners" goes on forever . . . one not-to-be-daunted grande dame who had never had a maid, either for herself or her household, an old-fashioned girl who had always "done" for her little family with her own fair hands, took unto herself a ladies' maid to escort her on the grounds of the southern gardens . . . hers not to reason why . . . HERS just to DO or dye.

Mrs. George L. Batchelder, Jr., is on the garden trip, which reminds us we haven't told you that Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Cameron Church, Jr. (Agnes Boardman), are yachting their way to Europe on Mr. George Batchelder's private yacht Thele on their honeymoon . . . imagine a six months' wedding trip on a floating palace these depression days . . . could life be sweeter?

Returns Home

WE RECEIVED A NOTE this morning telling us that Mrs. Edward Logan, wife of Lieut.-Gen. Edward Logan, has just returned from Washington where she has been visiting Mrs. Michael Mac-White, wife of the Irish minister to the United States . . .

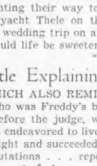
WHAT AN interesting visit it must have been at this time we remember well meeting the Irish minister and his charming wife with General and Mrs. Logan on the North Shore last summer . . . and Senator David I. Walsh . . . what a charmer he is? Mrs. Logan was very lovely in a red chiffon gown and was sweet enough to tell US that she read this column every night . . . and said she could always get a laugh out of it . . . which is how we intend it . . .



Mrs. Logan

Fair Plans

AND WE HAD SUCH AN interesting visit yesterday from Mrs. Horace S. Frazer . . . she got us all excited over the back-alley fair, which is to be given in the backyards of the houses which front on Exeter and Fairfield sts. on May 4 . . . a Farm and Garden benefit . . .

IT WILL BE A SORT OF country fair with booths and games. Mother Gooseland, fortune telling, balloon men, gypsy man . . . maybe with a monkey . . . just a frolic for everyone from 6 to 60 on a May day . . .

At the Tables

PRETTY GIRLS WILL ASSIST at all of the tables . . . you will recognize all of them, and what do you think . . . WE are going to attend in DISGUISE . . . just to see if anyone will know US . . . and we will ake the Princess, Sweet-face and Molly because they adore country fairs . . .

ISN'T IT MARVELOUS THAT May is almost here . . .? We received word today that May Day will open with a great pageant, in which Queen Elizabeth, portrayed by Cornelia Otis Skinner, a member of the class of 1922 at Bryn Mawr, will ride, attended by her court, followed by the oxen drawing the Maypole and by performers and dancers, much as it was done in the days of Good Queen Bess in England centuries back . . .

On Program

THIS WILL BE THE EIGHTH quadrennial Elizabethan pageant, to be presented at Bryn Mawr College with many New England girls will take part . . . Mrs. David J. Evans . . . mother of Lydia, dean of the college . . . Mrs. Theodore Morrison, Mrs. Horatio Rogers, Mrs. Joseph C. Ayb, Mrs. Edwin O. Baker and Mrs. Arthur B. Brooks are on the committee . . .

THE MAY QUEEN WILL BE crowned . . . Cornelia Drake of Miami and Lenox, Mass. . . . May dances will take place . . . Morris dances . . . jigs . . . sword dances . . . country, gypsy and shepherd dances . . .

Old Plays

OLD ENGLISH PLAYS, "Robin Hood," "The Old Wives Tales," "As You Like It," "Midsummer Night's Dream," "The Masque of Flowers" and "St. George and the Dragon" will be given in the afternoon . . . and in the evening there will be general dancing . . . college days . . . one never forgets them!

May Day Casts Announced

When the quadrennial Elizabethan May Day is presented by students of Bryn Mawr College on May 6 and 7, many girls of Boston and vicinity will take part. Miss Patricia Putnam will play the part of Erastus in "The Old Wives Tale." Miss Alice Rider will play that of Zantippa, while Miss Evelyn Thompson will be a fiddler in the same play. Miss Joan Hopkinson will play the part of Snout in "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

In "As You Like It," Miss Margaret Bradley will be a Forester, and in Robin Hood's band of merry men will be found Miss Helen Ripley and Miss Catherine Little, and also Miss Julia Gardner who will be a herald.

The dancers on the green will include Miss Rebecca Taft, Miss Halla Brown, Miss Gertrude Frantel, Miss Elizabeth Kent, Miss Frances Pleasanton, Miss Josephine Graton, Miss Margaret Haskell, Miss Rebecca Perry and Miss Anita de Varon. Miss Felicitas de Varon will be among the city lords and ladies as will also Miss Beatrice Butler. Among the tumblers will be Miss Lucy Sanborn, Miss Elizabeth Jackson, Miss Sylvia Bowditch and Miss Alice Brues.

The May Day celebration will include a pageant in which will appear Queen Elizabeth, portrayed by Cornelia Otis Skinner, the maypole drawn by oxen, Robin Hood, the May Queen, Morrice Dancers shepherds and shepherdesses, country dancers, tumblers and many more, to the number of 300 players.

BOOKS—and a Number of Things

By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

In her interesting book "Young Europe" (Doubleday, Doran) Madame Valentine Thomson, who is the daughter of the dean of the French Parliament, gives a kaleidoscopic picture of several countries, showing the changed order of things. "Like a tree whose daily growth can never be seen, but which is constantly adding to the strength of its roots and the height of its trunk, Young Europe is developing according to new and, as yet, unwritten laws." Many would be astonished today if they were told they have been living for the past years through the greatest economic and social revolution that has ever taken place in the world.

No portion of the earth fails to feel the repercussions now of the drama that started in 1914. Moscow, Prague, Paris, London, Washington and even Council Bluffs hear rumors and the heavy footfall of fate.

Madame Thomson made a tour of Germany. "It is most unfortunate," she says, "that the Social Democrats, now so politically wise when they came to power were not far-seeing enough to realize that after the trial of war strict economy should be the basis of any budget. Germany is paying heavily for this error. But the responsibility for this cannot be laid at the door of the Socialists alone. All political parties as well as all industrial and financial groups were temporarily carried away by an irresistible desire to restore the glory of Germany, which helped precipitate the nation into the financial depths in which it finds itself today."

Yet so swiftly do things move that changes have occurred since that was written.

No nation may act independently now. What is extraordinary today is that each national crisis for any personal revindication, each act of the separate nations, whether intended to prove their independence or not, has results which oblige them, usually in spite of themselves, to act with their sister States for their mutual good. It is more and more apparent that when a foreign policy tends to isolate a country is is constrained to renounce it. A new natural law seems to be developing, an unwritten law which prevents nations from acting alone."

This is what H. G. Wells has been preaching for many years.

Madame Thomson interviewed Laval and Briand, and set down their views. She wandered through the Reichstag, and listened to Chancellor Bruening. She saw Benes, in his simple house, not far from the town of Tabor. The Prime Minister of Czechoslovakia cannot be called imposing in his approach, but he gives one the impression of force in his direct eyes, in his precise gestures—for he is the most simple of men—one reads decision as his chief characteristic. Still young, actively interested in life and ideas, Benes is one of the most fascinating political talkers I have met, though he does not waste his time in words.

He told Madame Thomson that though his country was close to Russia, there was no menace of Communism. "Our chief concern is economy, reduction of the budget to fit general conditions, and living on a smaller scale. This we are sure will preserve the economic and financial structure as well as the political organization of the country. Thus our economies will help us ride the storm."

When nations, by intelligent and concerted action, show their recognition of their real interdependence and cease the vain endeavor each to obtain security at the expense of its neighbors, equilibrium will begin to reign again for all, and the crisis which is the same for all nations, will begin to give way to secure growth, the same also for all.

All Kipling lovers will wish to read the new volume of short stories and poems which make up "Limits and Renewals" (Doubleday, Doran). It is his first volume in six years.

I happen to have been reading a few days ago Americans and English short stories in the past few weeks and Kipling's book goes to prove how fashions in fiction change, just as do fashions in clothes. All the old stalelness is here, much of the old fire and fervor, but it is all one entered an ancient drawing-room, lit with candles, and discovered ladies in bombazine and men in stocks and colored coats.

There are none of us who may prefer these old costumes and the old sense of large leisure. For such is Kipling's genius is an event. It is as if we suddenly smelt a long-forgotten perfume out of the past.

The poem which precedes the gentle story of "The Miracle of Saint Jubanus" is a tribute to an old cure, lovely in its simplicity, and ending with the unforgettable lines:

And he was learned in Death and Life:
And he was logic's self (as France is).
He knew his folk—man, maid and wife—
Their forebears, failings, and finances.
Spite, Avarice, Devotion, Lies—
Passion ablaze or sick Obsession—
He dealt with each physician-wise;
Stern or most tender, at Confession.

Today? God knows where he may lie—
His Cross of weathered bea ls above him:
But one not worthy to untie
His unremitting prays you read—and love him.

Luigi Pirandello's new play, "Tonight We Improvise" (Dutton), is even more original than his "Six Characters in Search of an Author." Forsaking the roles assigned to them, these characters create a life of their own etude their author entirely, and tell their own story in their own way. It is an astonishing play to read, and it has been translated from the Italian by Samuel Putnam.

Pirandello himself is said to like it better than anything he has ever written.

Annual Ball by French Club

The Cercle des Etudiants Franco-Americaine presents its annual "Bal des Etudiants" in the Charing ballroom at Longwood Towers, Brookline, this evening. This ball will climax the social activities of the French Students' Club. The club is composed of French speaking students from all the colleges and universities in Greater Boston. Many notable lawyers and physicians from all over New England are among the former members of the Cercle.

One of the important features of the ball will be the grand march led by an honorary patron of the Cercle. This patron is chosen each year and the choice is a distinct honor bestowed upon a man of highest achievement and ability.

Governor and Mrs. Ely as well as Mayor James M. Curley, have accepted an invitation to act as honorary patrons for this occasion. Hon. J. C. Flamand, consul to Boston from France, and Mrs. Flamand will also be among the patrons.

By "BRUNO"

(A Friday feature. Inquiries invited. Kindly enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope for personal reply)

The MILLS BROTHERS—the sensational four-man orchestra, will make their first personal appearance in Boston at the Metropolitan Theater. Their Brunswick records are a sell-out and something tells us that an army of dial-twisters will cause some rapid-fire action at the box-office this week.

We take pleasure—in announcing the American issue of the HMV record by FRIDA LEIDER of the Liebestod from Tristan und Isolde and the Herzeleid from Parsifal. (V 7323)

PADEREWSKI—belongs to the small list of great world figures. This season he has contributed his services for many benefits, and given a fund for youthful musicians.

We are grateful for his record of the Moment Musicale in A flat major (V 7508) but we would like to hear his performance of a greater work, a concerto with orchestra for example.

Lawd, You Make the Night Too Long, has just received expert recording attention from the PICKENS SISTERS (V 22975) and PAUL WHITEMAN (V 22984).

MOZART—is the subject of a new book by Marcia DAVENPORT, daughter of ALMA GLUCK, whose prose has much of the style and rich beauty which characterized her mother's singing and made her one of the most beloved concert singers and recording artists.

Miss Davenport has not torn her subject apart but "in telling the truth" has made of Mozart a very human being, who requires the highest technical proficiency in his exponents, coupled with imagination and tonal perfection.

Among the very large Mozartian repertoire made available by the phonograph, we should like to call particular attention to Sigrid ONEGIN's The Violet and Spring Longing (V 1556), operatic arias by Elisabeth RETHBERG (V 7021), Lotte SCHOENE (V 7112) and Felicie HUNI-MIHACSEK (S 9030, 90139, 90112), religious arias by Hedwig von DEBICKA (S 9018) an orchestral gem, Eine kleine Nachtmusik (C 68016-7) conducted by Bruno WALTER, and the Concerto in F major (K 459) played by Georges BOSKOFF, noted Roumanian Mozart specialist. (Cset 170)

The Concerto in F major is one of the two which Mozart is known to have performed at the coronation of Leopold II, the last of the Holy Roman Emperors, but it has been entirely superseded in our time by the Coronation concerto in D (K.537).

JIMMY GREER, responsible for Gus Arnheim's arrangements in many of his best records, has just recorded the much-requested hit from Chevalier's latest picture, ONE HOUR WITH YOU, coupled with Music in the Moonlight (V2297), a number which Jimmy has made famous at the Cocoanut Grove in Las Angeles.

If You have been troubled—by an unsteady turntable in the playing of Program Transcriptions, ask your dealer for the small rubber nipple which screws down over the record and holds it firmly in place while playing. A distinct improvement will be quickly noticed.

We congratulate—the DECCA GRAMOPHONE Co. on its new affiliation with the Polydor Company. The time is at hand to present some of these records in this country. JACK HYLTON records exclusively for the Decca Company and admirers of the English jazz maestro are already familiar with many of his new releases.

How long—before we'll have an American release of the Folies Musicales by BETOVE, the imitator of German, Spanish and Chinese singers (Parlophone RA220161)?

The Gondoliers—is the latest set in the D'Oyly Carte series of Gilbert and Sullivan operas. (V-C16). This sparkling social satire was first produced at the Savoy Theater, London, on Dec. 8, 1889, but was not received with too much enthusiasm. Its revival in 1919, however, proved to the satisfaction of the English public that the melodious work was one of the finest of the Savoy operas.

There is no hint in either the freshness of the music or the ingenuity of the plot that the authors were well past the age when such a work might be expected from them. Note particularly the quartet, "In a contemplative fashion" (side 20). The counterpoint of the voices against the Gregorian simplicity of the theme itself, is a masterpiece of comic effect, revealing the satirical intent of the entire work. The chorus, "Dance a cachucha," has become familiar here through the work of the Apollo and Harvard Glee Clubs.

The performance of the members of the D'Oyle Carte Opera Company is beyond praise.

Floyd Gibbons Given Fine Welcome

By N. F. T.

Countless little birds are twittering glibly here in Winthrop Square—and that's not all. This morning, one of them perched on the spacious sill to tweet-tweet awhile through a certain fifth-floor window that hasn't been opened so wide since just about this time last year. Think of it, carefree creatures who wing through space continuously. They never need receiving sets to know what's in and on the air. This particular birdie reports as follows:

STAR SLEUTH

New York City, as it sits heavy of the Hearst publishing organization and a surging throng of persons Knickerbockerites welcomed Floyd Gibbons back to Gotham's canyon of concrete yesterday. Reserve it or not, the famous fast talker couldn't find words with which to express himself very readily . . . Whoops, remember yesterday an item here said O. O. McIntyre was one of few columnists holding out on broadcasting? Well, Oh O'Mac is at last signed . . . as our little sparrow spy, which is why he couldn't accept a Ziegfeld bid for last Sunday night . . . Details another day . . . Red Necktins are not acceptable for Television . . . It seems they show up white before photoelectric cells. Matrimony came to the Tastyeast Jesters "Pep" Vyne and Vyne Virginia with a lot of girls who wrote them fan letters . . . imagine!

FURTHER FLUTTERINGS

Norman Arnold, Cliff Johnson, Walter Kidder and Earl Widener, better know.. as the Tenatones, wind up current program booking Sunday night. It's the 71st consecutive job they've acted for it's sponsor, having completed over 200 special song selections especially arranged . . . Bob Pipley who fashions facts as strange, returns to his regular radio job May 4th . . . John (WBZ) Clark is reading garden hints, studio lassies have donned light fluffy frocks, while crooner fancy turns fervently to moon love songs. Spring MUST be here. Furthermore, who penned the pages to a very colorful, heavy voiced little Columbia System "mike" man behind that wicked laugh? 'Tis something even the never say so! . . .

KING LEO VISITS WHITE'S

King Leo, one of the largest lions in captivity, the idol of children and parents alike who have seen him in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures, is appearing in person at the R. H. White Co. next to Toyland on the third floor.

Thousands are expected to pay their respects to King Leo during his stay at the R. H. White Co. because he will make daily appearances Saturday with his trainer. he will stage three shows at 11 a. m., 2 and 4 p. m. Immediately following the 4 o'clock show King Leo will be fed his daily portion of 17 pounds of beef.

King Leo was born in the Nubian desert of Africa, weighs 733 pounds and is 10 feet long. His stay at the R. H. White Co. will be part of the observance of King Leo's 18th birthday party. Movie fans of New England will have their first opportunity to see King Leo in all his majesty, hear his thunderous roar.

1 MAN PLUS 3 WOMEN EQUALS 2 MURDERS

Mutilated Bodies of Salesman and Girl Offer the Newest "Love" Tragedy Problem

By ELSIE ROBINSON
Written Especially for International News Service.

New York, April 22 (INS)—The 4 been keeping company for two years.

Then a keeping company today — is the number.

Cold cunning waits green fire-eyed Lust-Curtion at it. Who put them there?

Who hammered those nine gaping pits into Edward Brinker's skull . . . scattered shattered bone like bits of picture frame over the torn ground . . . then kneeled and gouged and jostled brain-pulp . . . like a judge pets a mangy cur?

Who crammed the gauze down poor Rose Welk's throat . . . Tired shut the eyes that knew no rest the bright head . . . Stilled sound threat from ear to ear?

Who did this thing—and why? And where? There on the vacant land where they were found? I wonder

BODIES NEAR TRAFFIC

A simple place, suddenly turned sinister, that empty stretch of sand outside Minden, Long Island, to the outskirts of any American town and you'll come on the same scene. Twenty or 30 acres of less-or-land, cleared even of tall land out for real estate development. Take a bit of paper—throw a map for size—you may solve the mystery of that murder as quickly as a district attorney.

On one side, a busy highway stretching . . . right unshadowed, through Garden City to New York. Traffic on that highway all night, remember. Milk wagons, vegetable trucks in the early morning. Delivering parties at any day at hour . . .

That—on one side. To the right, a third of a mile a settlement of large well built homes. Farther off on the left, but still within hearing distance, a group of farmhouses. Straight ahead on the horizon, a long hair of trees and a dip in the sketchy earth road where the land falls through brush, to a swamp pool.

Four boundaries one alone offering concealment and secrecy for a murder. In the midst those 30 acres. Flat as a hand, bare as a bone. Yet it was exactly upon that flatness and bareness 150 feet from the highway, that they were found

Would you choose such a spot to commit a murder where the victims must have huddled and brooded and shrieked before the silence came? Or would you, maybe, have started the thing elsewhere, and taken them there only to dump them, like rubbish in some hate?

It was bright that night, remember. White moonlight. So white the scanty spears of grass cast thin, net filaments of shadows on the gleaming earth. No shade where a hunted thing might crawl or a hunting thing might hide.

A great, open brightness. Silence like a caught breath—waiting. The moon like a lidless eye staring. Staring as the clock swung round from eight to ten . . . from ten to twelve . . . from twelve to two, to four—then, with five, came the flood of morning light.

LABOR FINDS THEM

HIS FAITHLESSNESS

But now the place was no longer flat, no longer white

Two things lay there in twisted, broken heaps.

Two pools seaped red into the hard, pale clay.

So a laborer found them. Fled, jerking, into town.

But when in that stillness was this chaos done? By whom? For why?

A simple solution? Maybe. Maybe not. You know the story

The man—Edward Brinker, Jr. a fervent philanderer. Pudgy-pretty face. Trick mustache. Pawing eyes with puffs beneath. The—hunt' his father-in-law called him. Yet even that father-in-law admits he staked thousands of dollars on the hopes that someone so casually spilled.

His divorced first wife—actually, as far as the records show, his only legal wife. Big, soft, simple Ruth Prinker—sobbing in horror and heartbreak—unable even yet to hate the man whom she divorced five years ago so that their little girl might not grow up in the shadow of faithlessness

His woman—Josephine Josephine Astrid Eilstrom—the full name runs. She insists there was another—and herself known, in the place where they lived together, as Mrs. Brinker. Bought him a wedding ring as proof of their legal union. A cheap thing—it cost her $2.1

girl. Just another cheap modern quadrangle. But behind these units settled facts something that lent modern simple. Something as evil as Satanism sinister as the jungle as jungle tom-toms beating, beating through a gathering darkness.

WOMAN, OR GANG?

A dark girl brooding—poisoned by humiliation and jealousy and fear. What is that other story of the two shots fired"

A fair girl knowing nothing of shame or anger, working happily, planning joyously.

And a man moving slowly as a shuttle back and forth—back and forth as he had always moved. As he always expected to move. Smart guy. They couldn't get him.

Couldn't they" Well—something got him. God him plenty. What

Was that jungle vengeance—there on the edge of moonlit American meadows? Does Josephine—shrewd, in hysteria before that carrion in the morgue, or gulping with her dark eyes folding inward and her thin hands clenched shut . . . Know much—or nothing?

And if she knows nothing—then what? Did something larger—more sinister than even the jungle—take Edward Brinker for a ride? Gangdom" Tapped months, picking gullets—cracking open a little puffed up man who had played with too many do's?

Brinker's Friends Quizzed for Clue in Double Death

New York, April 22 (INS)—Companions who in happier times joined with Edward F. Brinker, Jr., in gay and boisterous celebrations, were questioned by police today in the hope they could shed light on the murder of Brinker and Rose Welk who were found on a vacant lot bludgeoned and mutilated two days ago.

Still working on the theory that Brinker, a sober, industrious salesman by day, and a gay man-about-town by night, incurred the enmity of some girl by his inconsistency, police were desperately attempting to find someone who could provide the motive and the names of those who were responsible for one of the most fiendish murders ever to be committed on Long Island.

A little black book containing dozens of names mostly of women, may be the clue which will bring the slayers into the net of the law. The book indicated that many women stepped through the carefree life of Brinker and that most of them apparently was able to hold his capricious affections for any length of time.

Further investigation into the past of Brinker's pretty companion Rose Welk, who paid the penalty of death for her association with him, only added to the mystery which has clouded the case from the start.

Police say that Rose was an industrious, level headed, church going girl, quite different from the usual run of Brinker's companions. Apparently his personality and his undoubted charm made her forget her ripe upbringing and her customary steady mode of living.

She had introduced Brinker to her family with the proud shyness of a girl who is presenting her betrothed. They had accepted him as their future son-in-law even while he was unknown to them, living as the husband of another woman.

They are saddened and bewildered by the storms of passion which loosed their child into eternity and they have been unable to find any way to help at all.

Today Brinker's former companions in night life are going on the dueling attorney's office Mineola and telling with relevant tips of their associations with the salesman.

"THE MAN WITH THE HOE" SET MARKHAM FIRMLY IN LITERATURE

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

IT IS PLEASANT to know that Edwin Markham calculates that writing "The Man With the Hoe" has been worth no less than $250,000 to him. A quarter of a million, even over a period of 30 years, is not such a bad return on the investment of a single poem, much better, I imagine, than that from most successful best sellers.

PROF. ROGERS

Markham will be 80 years old this Saturday. His reputation in literature depends, and will probably depend, on this one poem which he wrote in San Francisco in 1899. Like many another famous poem, notably Kipling's "Recessional," it was printed first in a newspaper. Markham received $40 for it.

Not that Markham has not written many other poems, one of which, the one on Lincoln, is not only as fine as "The Man With the Hoe" but is also one of the few great American poems that have been written on Lincoln.

Place in Literature Secure

There are not many instances in literature where a man's whole reputation has depended on a single poem. Edward Fitzgerald, of course, is remembered entirely by his adaptation of "The Rubaiyat" of Omar Khayyam, but that was a poem of a hundred quatrains. Markham's is a poem of only a few dozen lines but their place in American literature is probably as secure as that gained by the complete works of many more fecund poets. That is not to say that you will find it invariably in anthologies of our poetry. Many critics feel that it is greater propaganda than it is poetry, that the form and beauty have been subordinated to the "message," to use a favorite evangelical catch-word.

Nevertheless, simple as the poem is, with its picture of Millet's laborer leaning upon his hoe, weary, ignorant, brutalized, it embodies a powerful and imaginative conception of Labor and it includes many really powerful lines, which have that high seriousness that Matthew Arnold demanded in poetry and not a few touches of the grand manner which is the test of philosophic poetry. Wordsworth and Arnold and Emerson attained the grand manner frequently, that combination of clean simplicity and nobility which is unforgettable. To say that Markham's poem measures up not unworthily to Emerson's "Daughters of Time, the Hypocritic Days" is not to over-praise.

It came at just the right moment, as Kipling's "Recessional" did. It came at the end of that period of political and business corruption, of industrial sweating and strikes and horror (symbolized by the Homestead Strike of 1892) and of social discontent, to which the recent autobiographies of Lincoln Steffens and Emma Goldman bear such eloquent witness.

Warning Was Borne Out

And it came just before that era of social awakening and reform, of which Roosevelt was, if not the actual leader, at least the figurehead and symbol. That decade was the decade of Roosevelt's trust prosecutions, of the birth of the Progressive party, of the journalistic work of the 'muckrakers,' Ida Tarbell, Ray Stannard Baker, Lincoln Steffens, Samuel Hopkins Adams, Norman Hapgood, Upton Sinclair and Jacob Riis. It was the decade of great work by the settlement houses and the civic associations. It was the decade of arbitration as a principle in labor disputes, instead of bloody strikes.

"The Man With the Hoe" pulled together and made vocal something that was in the air, the widespread accusation of society against capitalism for its brutalizing treatment of labor.

"Whose was the hand that slanted back his brow,
Whose breath blew out the light within his brain? . . .
Stolid and stunned, the brother to the ox."

ending with Markham's impassioned warning to kings and millionaires to beware when this dumb thing arose and took matters into his own hands. Seventeen years later the Russian revolution burst upon the world.

Many criticized the poem severely at the time, among them Andrew Carnegie, then connected in the public mind with the Homestead Strike and the killing working conditions in Pittsburgh, the seven day week and the 12 hour shift. Carnegie gave out an interview, claiming in his characteristically bland and optimistic fashion that man's brow was higher than ever before, his work lighter, his prospects brighter, a thoroughly cheerful evolutionary point of view, in which Capital claimed all the credit and disclaimed all the responsibility.

But in the main the people took the poem to their hearts and felt that something had been said which badly needed to be said. Since then Markham's fame has been secure.

Answer in Pitkin's Work

I am not going to reprint the poem. It is too well known. But I should like to print an answer to it. It serves as the foreword to Walter B. Pitkin's "History of Human Stupidity" (Simon and Shuster), and although it is not signed I suspect Professor Pitkin of writing it. It follows Markham very closely and is a pretty good job.

Strong with the brawn of centuries he swings
His mighty hoe and laughs upon the ground.
The vigor of the ages in his face,
Light on his back the burden of the world.
Who made his simple raptures and content,
A creature far too strong to grieve or hope,
Solid and plain, great brother to the Ape?
Who loosened and let down this brutish jaw?
Whose was the hand that slanted back this brow?
Whose breath fanned to a feeble glow this brain?

This is the thing that Nature made and gave
To struggle with unconquered lands and seas;
To dig, to hew, to fight for you and me,
Who trace the stars and search the heavens for power
And nurse illusions of Eternity.
This Nature dreamed when Nature shaped the suns
And marked their ways upon the ancient deep.
On all the planets of the starry universe
There is no shape more charged with hope than this,
More eloquent of Nature's stratagem
That moves unthought, unplanned, unseen;
No shape more promising of higher Minds,
Beneath whose tenson you and I are apes.

Not such fine poetry as Markham's, but far more resolutely hopeful about Man as an evolving animal.

PLANES CIRCLE AT O'BRIEN FUNERAL

MATES IN ARMS PAY FINAL TRIBUTE TO AIR SUPERVISOR

The flag-draped casket containing the remains of Lieut. Robert Lincoln O'Brien, state supervisor of aviation, being borne to the Church of St. John the Evangelist in Winthrop today. Pall bearers escorting the body, as it was carried on a gun caisson, were drawn from the ranks of United States forces. Honorary pallbearers included regular army, National Guard, American Legion and civic notables. Overhead circled planes in formation. (Staff photo.)

NOTABLES PAY LAST TRIBUTE TO AIR HEAD

State Supervisor of Aviation Is Laid to Rest With Elaborate Military Ceremonies

"Number two file" was blank in a formation of National Guard planes that wheeled above Winthrop today—for, in the church below the planes, funeral services were being held for Lieut. Robert Lincoln O'Brien whose place in the formation was left vacant.

National Guard, Army and civilian fliers were present with state officials at the military funeral for Lieut. O'Brien, state supervisor of aviation and a World War flier.

The largest funeral Winthrop has ever seen was from the O'Brien home at 953 Shirley st., Winthrop with services at 10 a. m. in the Church of St. John the Evangelist.

MILITARY DETAILS

The high mass of requiem was celebrated by the Rev. James S Kelleher.

Taking part in the funeral were details of the 26th Div. Aviation the 211th Coast Artillery, the 212th Coast Artillery band and Winthrop post, American Legion.

Pallbearers were Master Sergt Richard J. Gehan, Staff Sergt. Albert J. Panza, Sergts. Joseph Reed and Mark W. Murphy, Corp Francis P. Kilbane and Private Lawrence D. Butler.

NOTABLES ATTEND.

Honorary pall bearers included Col. Rush C. Lincoln, air officer of the First Corps Area; Maj. Claude W. Cummings, Capt. Albert L. Esson, airport superintendent, and officers and men of the 26th Div and the army air detachment at Boston airport.

Present at the services were Adj.-Gen. John H. Agnew, representing Governor Ely, William F. Long, Boston park commissioner representing Mayor Curley; Registrar of Motor Vehicles Morgan T. Ryan, heading a delegation of motor vehicle inspectors; Col. Louis E. Boutwell, air officer for the state; Maj. Clarence E. Hodge commanding officer of the 26th Div. Aviation, Capt. Joseph A. Wynn, commanding the aero squad at the airport, Lieut. Norman F. Berteison, Capt. E. Stanley Beck and many other notables.

WIFE HAMMER VICTIM FAINTS

Mrs. Joseph Pinho, 33, of Shawmut ave., victim of a hammer attack last December, became hysterical and collapsed today in Suffolk Superior Court just as she finished testifying against her alleged attacker, David Pires.

She was carried from the witness stand by Sgt. Robert Lynch and a court officer. A doctor revived her in the corridor and her husband took her to City Hospital.

Pires is on trial before Judge Cox at a jury-waived session. Mrs. Pinho was grilled in cross-examination by Atty. Herbert Cashman.

Pires is charged with beating the woman with a claw-hammer to avenge himself on her husband with whom he had quarreled.

AGED LYNN PAIR IN DEATH PACT

Leaving money for the rent of the home and notes to the landlord and several relatives, Forest Wilson, 76, and his sister, Josephine M. of Chatham st., Lynn sat down side by side today, turned on the gas range and went to their death.

Both were ill and neither wanted to be left alone. They had been companions through life and chose to meet death together.

Their hands were clasped when Mrs. Lovell, the landlady, who lives on the first floor, entered the apartment to investigate escaping gas.

The note, written by Williams who was a retired shoeworker, to Mrs. Lovell, read:

"My sister is no better. Her appetite is gone. My legs are getting worse. Do not judge too harshly."

"You take our coke and wood I have written to Mr. Bishop, my lawyer, to let him know that my nieces can have what they want."

HOLDUP MAN IS CAUGHT

Scores of shopers in Central sq., Cambridge, today, saw Inspector Mark Cleary and Chester Laing, a chain store manager, pursue and capture James McCarthy, 19, of West Philadelphia, robber.

Armed with a water pistol, McCarthy went into the chain store at 1413 Massachusetts ave., Lafayette sq., and forced Laing to hand over $18 from the cash register.

When he left, Laing shouted for help and started the pursuit, to be joined by Cleary who happened to be going by.

ATTY. CONLON — CAPT. BROWN — JUDGE HAMMOND

Judge Franklin Hammond of superior court, accompanied by attorneys, went to the mud flats off Mile rd., Dorchester, and were shown "about the place" by Capt. Dewalden Brown. Capt. Brown is shown pointing to position of his barge-home as he explains in detail what he claims is rightful possession of his home. A realty firm has asked that he be removed. Capt. Brown, who has been on the premises for 25 years, claims squatter rights. In the group are Atty. A. J. Conlon, Capt. Dewalden Brown and Judge Hammond. (Staff photo.)

'BAD WILLIE' HAS STEADY JOB

William E. ("Bad Willie") Gray went to work at a fairly steady job today.

With a few more bullet holes since he last hung his hat in State Prison, Gray was put to work in the mattress shop. Sounds "soft."

He promised to be a good "[redacted] Willie," Warden Hogsett said; he promised not to break out as he did at Charles st. jail.

The job is good for something like 20 to 30 years, the court having decreed that "Bad Willie" spend that much time as a guest of the State for the arms of holdups and gunplay that make up his life in the outside world.

ALL ROOSEVELT, SAYS GLYNN

Former Fire Commissioner Theodore A. Glynn told about 300 women at a rally at Hotel Touraine today that the nomination of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt by the Democratic national convention appears certain.

"The great enthusiasm at the largely attended rallies for Roosevelt in the Boston wards last night," said he, "shows that the people are turning in large numbers to the leadership of Mayor Curley in his drive for Roosevelt.

"This is because of the vivid description of present economic conditions given by Mayor Curley and the fact that the voters realize Roosevelt is the only man who can bring relief to the unemployed—the only man who can successfully meet President Hoover on election day.

"And we take special pride in the knowledge that our own mayor had the foresight to take up the gauntlets for the Roosevelt standard."

BELMONT DOGS SEIZED IN SCARE

Stray dogs in Belmont will be rounded up and turned over to the M. S. P. C. A., Chief of Police John J O'Brien of Belmont told Dr Francis H. Rowley, head of the society, today.

Chief O'Brien said that there were about 300 unlicensed dogs in Belmont and they will have to be seized because of a case of rabies several days ago, but declared his policemen will do no shooting.

Curley Sees Boom in Wheat Rate Cut

The action of the trunk line railroads in reducing the freight rate on wheat from Buffalo to this city means increased business for this port during the coming summer, Mayor Curley said today.

This action means that much wheat which under former rates would be shipped throug Montreal will now go through Boston

Feud With Galvin; His Indictment in Fight

CHAPTER V

By BERT FORD

After the death of Michael Well- leader in the ward, both Martin Lomasney and Ward 8 were without leaders and Owen A. Galvin grabbed the ward. The Cleveland-Hendricks Club occupied a cellar at Livingston and Brighton sts., known as the "rat pit."

Young Lomasney fought Galvin from the start and soon became the recognized opposition leader. For 10 years Martin fought Gus Galvin for supremacy.

The Lomasney-Galvin fights were among the most picturesque and most violent in the political history of the city.

"In those exciting times," added Lomasney, "a lot of young fellows voted before they reached their majority in their zeal to win. It was surprising how early some of them celebrated their 21st birthdays.

"Funds were scarce and strategy had to be used. That was before the days of the Australian ballot system and we had to have our own ballots printed. It was necessary to get out as imposing a ballot as possible to make a favorable impression and we got out a very striking one the year we put up William Taylor, Jr., for the city council.

Tickets on Tick

Martin Uses His Credit to Win Political Race

"Taylor later became an editor on the Boston Post and was a clever all-round newspaperman. He also served with honor in the senate. His father was commissioner of health.

"We fellows in Ward 8 thought a lot of Bill Taylor. He was a regular fellow. We didn't bother him about expenses. That was our burden. I remember that we had our ballots printed that year by Frank McQueeney, who later became a doctor. Some of our fellows called for the ballots the day before election and McQueeney told them they couldn't get them without spot cash. They came back and told me.

"I went to McQueeney's printing office, feeling pretty glum, I didn't have the money to pay for the ballots either, but I guess I must have impressed Frank when I said, 'Mac, you give me those ballots and I'll have the money, every cent of it, for you at 10 o'clock tomorrow sharp and there won't be any ifs about it. It means a lot to us to get those ballots tonight and you have my word of honor.'

"He turned over the ballots and we drove to our headquarters in a hero's role. It was well guarded, because in those hectic days it was not unusual for another crowd to waylay you and steal ballots for their own use.

"It was a case of survival of the fittest in those days.

"Did I ever have stage fright on the stump? No. I always had something to say and said it as illinits and briefly as possible. I preferred action to words. My policy has always been to get the voters out. That counts more than long-winded oratory. Voting, not spouting, has always been our motto in the West End."

The political fever was so rampant in the West End and North End in '93 that it was almost impossible for any full-blooded young fellow to avoid infection Martin said.

"Those were revolutionary days in politics," added Martin. "No wonder caucuses and rallies were red hot and that about all we insurgents got were bruises and black eyes, but we kept hammering and working and finally routed the foe.

PLAYGIRLS IN LOVE « A Serial About the NEW Modern Girl « By MAY CHRISTIE

Jack Ordway Tells Judith He's Crazy About Her; She Misses Barry

By MAY CHRISTIE

AN HOUR slipped by. Another hour. Something seemed to curl up and die in Judith's weary soul.

Barry and Loranda . . . where had they gone? . . . where were they?

At ten minutes past the hour she stood on the moonlit terrace, with Barry and Loranda.

He had swung her in the space of the minutes while the Cyrano Inn music was at its sweetest, tunes.

Lorinda just pretended to be dreadfully disappointed.

"And I, the girl I was quite an expert! She ne'd on his arm, then he raised her to her feet after her tumble in the whirl of the China tango.

"You're splendid. You just need a little practice, that's all," Barry told her.

NEEDS PRACTICE

That strengthened an idea that had been simmering in her mind as to the best way of stopping him out of Judith's orbit this evening.

He was attracted to the little country girl . . . under Loranda's most scornful looks and brilliant sallies at the supper-table, he had really been quite restless.

She had feared that. But it had put her on her mettle, just the same. She wanted him. She would make him fall in love with her. If fair means didn't turn the trick, well, there were other devices she would employ.

Loranda prided herself upon at her early age on among the subtle bag of tricks she would be outdone by a simpleton like Judith.

"Let's take a five-mile trek in a direction I know. You can tell me my faults as we go along. I'm dying to improve." She smiled in her dazzling way at him.

"But it'll take too long. The others will wonder where——"

He broke off, uncertain.

"Nonsense! They haven't even missed us yet. We'll be back inside an hour," she asserted.

A little startled, with Judith although he knew that he himself—against his will—had been put in a false position tonight, Barry consented.

Because of her close friendship with their hostess, Betty Graves—daughter of the president of the bank, where he had gained a steady

BEHIND THE SCREEN

"You flirted, yourself! Be fair! I saw him looking for you when you were behind that screen with Ordway."

"I know. I'd love to believe he was jealous—if I could. But Loranda—she's so beautiful—"

"Nonsense. She's an artificial little minx. For looks and real charm, you've got it all over her Judith."

"If I could only think I had! Oh, what am I saying? I'm a fool! She's Betty Graves' bosom friend, and Betty's father, the big president of the bank, and all, it's up to Barry to—to cultivate Loranda."

"Nothing of the kind! He isn't a mean grafter—a contemptible climber like that. He's far too fine for him, Judith!"

"I—I'm afraid no matter how you comforted her friend that Barry Deane was just like all the other handsome young fellows you've met in New York where a person was continually in touch with wealth and luxury. And after they'd been introduced at the dance, and they'd had a little talk, it was quite natural that he should be would ask to see you home."

The rain was to the string. The waiter in the hall. Many of the women's cards were stacked in Loranda's ruthless hands. What price poor Judith's happiness?

JUDITH BLUSHED

"Darling, I didn't like to butt in before," said Zelia very kindly, as she sat on the edge of Judith's bed, "but hasn't he ever said a word about—about marriage?"

Judith flew to Zelia's forehead.

"He—he told me that he loved me, Zelia. I believed him. You know how often we've been out together, and all——"

Zelia sighed grimly. It was her personal opinion, though now was not the time to voice it, that at least 10 men out of every 12 were rotters.

"Men don't usually propose right away, I mean, there's always a courting time first, isn't there, Zelia?"

Zelia looked down compassionately into the lovely, tear-stained eyes that were like bluebells under water. A lump rose to her throat because of the piteous appeal in Judith's eyes . . . what could she say to comfort her?

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

Zelia blames Loranda for taking Barry away from the party. What happens to them is revealed tomorrow.

Albeit quick sometimes—he'd be a fool not to keep on the right side of Lorinda.

One had to be diplomatic in New York if one were to get anywhere at all. Competition was so keen. People waiting to take one's place. Always a name—one must be polite.

ONLY A GOOD FRIEND

Besides Lorinda was a queen of the season tonight. A her name was on everybody's lips. There was in a sense a triumph about her.

She hadn't particularly noticed Barry before. He had been kind to her in tiresome very often.

That tonight—at this very moment in his arms—she grew dizzy at the way she dared him to show her how to do a certain step on the floor, and how she gloried in him when she was a most beautiful.

The beauty of Judith's face—of her whole figure—as she moved with Barry had burned from Lorinda. It was a jet of acute pain to see them together with the grace of movement by which Lorinda herself was so much admired.

Judith and Barry were glad when off together—it was a full two hours before Lorinda, and it left the inn——

Jack took one part. He was out in the night. It was an intensely bracing—a warm against it . . .

HER LIPS WERE DRY

Judith's lips were dry. Mechanically her tongue had something moistened—though her heart was sore.

She told herself: "Don't be a fool. You've asked for this. You let Barry see how much you care. Now he's on to pastures new. That's natural."

Jack Ordway was whispering charming things. He was glad he'd been set there next to her, and he'd like always to sit at his table.

"Judith, you're making me feel things an' stop erring, darling—I tell you, no man's worth it."

They were back in their bedroom to the dressing-room at supper. Margarette and Cora was on the edge of Judith's bed trying to comfort her.

"It's those drinks have gone to my head . . . that 'gin rose' . . . I'm a damn fool . . . pay no attention to me, Zelia!"

"Judith, I'd no idea you were as crazy as that about him—this Barry."

"I'm not. But I mean—the way he turned me down tonight—Loranda, Saint-in-law, I—Cora—it was cruel of him!"

Zelia, who was in for once manhandled her in her arms and patted her back and was on the point of [illegible]

The Marry-Go-Round; Greetings

By HELEN ROWLAND

Some girls I've kissed, when I felt [illegible] and gay,
Have looked so different when we [illegible]
That I have simply paused to say:
"SO charmed!"—
And something sped harmfully away.

I was never more delighted than when the gifted Mr. Gilbert Seldes voiced a protest against the current "How do you do?" as the thing to say on being introduced. Never was there a more meaningless, stupid salutation—and never will there be a more unvacuous one. "How do you do?" hasn't even the virtue of being sincere—because you don't care a hang how a perfect stranger does, what he does or even WHOM he does!

If you are going to be insincere, why not be amusing, polished, crafty and complimentary?

Who will ever forget the genial "DEE-lighted!" of the late President Theodore Roosevelt—the salutation for which he was feared, and which did so much to make him popular. That and his smile went straight through you—and buttoned up the back!

There were lots of other graceful and chaste salutations in those days, quite proper and modish

"Delighted, I'm sure!" and "SO nice to know you!" and "This IS a pleasure!"—and, of course, "SO charmed!" All of them gracious and complimentary and designed to make the new acquaintance feel pleased with himself.

A courteous and flattering salutation establishes at once an entente cordiale between you and the stranger, and puts you both at your ease. Even a curt "Glad to meet you" or Mr. Jiggs' more warmth and meaning and [illegible] "How do you do?"

About the only flattering greeting we hear nowadays is the impertinent "Where have you been all my life?" And that is already in the discard.

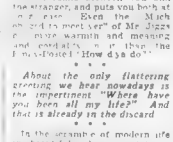
In the scramble of modern life and its [illegible] and ornamental custom after another has fallen into disuse, and we are rapidly becoming a nation of boors and hoodlums.



[illegible] We gulp our meals, jostle each other on a crowd, bawl each other out in traffic and leave our manners to the waiters

But if we are going to be insincere when we're introduced, why not can the white lie and tell good, big, flattering WHOOPER—and say "DEE-lighted!" or "SO charmed!"?

Etiquette for Introductions

By MRS. BEECKMAN.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

When my nine-year-old daughter introduces her little school friends to me, how should I acknowledge the introduction. Is she old enough to be introduced to my friends. MART SMITH.

Say "How do you do, Florence"? Then how of "How do you do" is the best way to acknowledge any introduction for nine years or [illegible]

The addition of the name is [illegible] arranging the formal name for an older person of course. Say, for example, "How do you do, Mrs. Jones?" [illegible] of which an introduction means, it is correct.

Engagement Dinner

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

When a couple become engaged what is the proper procedure? Would it be out of order for the engaged girl to have a dinner party, her mother extending the invitations, to include both immediate families?

BRIDE-TO-BE.

For the bride's mother to give her a dinner party to announce the engagement is in excellent form, and it is the best of plans, too, to include the members of the two families.

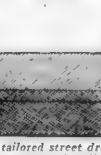
Many Diseases From 'Focal Infection'

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

DOCTORS use many words and terms which are confusing to the layman. "Focal infection" is one of them.

This expression has come into use within the past decade.

A man may complain of pain in the back, knee or leg. Upon physical examination no abnormality is found. The real foundation of disturbance may be in the teeth, nose, tonsils, appendix, gall bladder, or some other part of the body, while the symptoms affect parts quite distant from the original point of infection.



Dr. Copeland

The teeth are the most frequent seat of focal infection. This is best determined by an X-ray examination. The X-ray is of value, too, in determining the conditions of the appendix and gall bladder.

Infected tonsils are often the seat of so-called focal infection. Digestive disturbances, headache, high blood pressure and many other constitutional complaints sometime result from the neglect of diseased tonsils. Infected and enlarged tonsils are a serious menace to the health, and should be removed as soon as possible.

A diseased appendix also may be the seat of focal infection. Pain in the region of the appendix may or may not be present, but as a rule there are constant digestive disturbances, nausea, headache, backache and constipation. These symptoms all disappear and the general health becomes markedly improved after the removal of the diseased appendix.

The significance of focal infection is now recognized by all authorities. In former years many complaints did not respond to treatment because the possibility of focal infection was not recognized, and the real seat of trouble therefore was not found. Modern methods of diagnosis by means of the X-ray and special laboratory tests enable us to discover the sources of irritation or the focus of infection.

16 Is Too Young to Fret, Says Miss Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of sixteen, considered very attractive and dress well. I have been keeping steady company with a boy six years my senior. He has finished school while I am still in high school. My trouble is that I do not know whether I like him or not. When I am in his company I do not seem to care much for him but when he has left me I think to myself "Why can't I like him?" He declares that he loves me and only me. Please advise me how to increase my love for him. L.

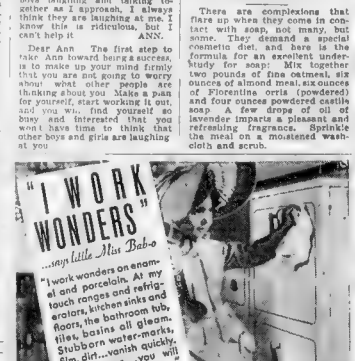
Dear L.: Don't try to force yourself to love this boy. At your age there are other interesting things to think about and worry about, without fretting about falling in love.

To Overcome It

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am a sophomore in high school and am afraid I have an inferiority complex, which I would like to get rid of as quickly as possible. I am considered nice-looking and dress well, but whenever I see a group of girls and boys laughing and talking together as I approach, I always think they are laughing at me. I know this is ridiculous, but I can't help it. ANN.

Dear Ann: The first step to take Ann toward being a success, is to make up your mind firmly that you are not going to worry about what other people are thinking about you. Make a pan for yourself, start working it out, and you will find yourself so busy and interested that you won't have time to think that other boys and girls are laughing at you.



Recipes For Delicious Marlows

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WEAN

WE HAD a present in the Martha Lee Cooking School—at least a can of lovely fat marshmallows, and with them some recipes from a friend of mine who's doing some splendid recipe research work in Chicago.

She's been trying to solve the problem of making ice cream in electric refrigerators with the least possible trouble, and best results. She's tried to avoid the buttery and gelatinous mixtures that so many object to. And judging from the results of the first recipe that we tested, she certainly has discovered something.

Try try this Pineapple Mallobet.

PINEAPPLE MALLOBET

20 marshmallows
1 cup juice from canned pineapple
1-3 cup water
2 tbsps. lemon juice
3 tsps. sugar
¼ cup egg whites
Few grains salt
Put pineapple juice, water and marshmallows over hot water and steam to the liquid stage. Add lemon juice and one half the sugar and set aside until slightly jelled. Add remaining sugar and to egg whites. Whip them very stiff and combine with foundation, mixing thoroughly. Pour into tray and freeze without stirring.

MACAROON MARLOW

15 marshmallows
8 macaroons
1 cup milk
1 cup whipped cream

Steam marshmallows in milk over boiling water. Crush macaroons, add marshmallow mixture and chill. When slightly thickened add stiffly beaten cream and pour into tray of the refrigerator and freeze from six to eight hours.

LEMON MALLOBET

20 marshmallows
1 cup water
6 tbsps. lemon juice
3 tbsps. sugar
¼ cup egg whites

Melt the marshmallows with the water, remove from heat, add lemon juice and 2 tbsps. of the sugar. When slightly jellied, add the egg whites, whipped stiff with the remaining sugar. Combine thoroughly. Pour into tray and freeze without stirring.

Hints From the Beauty Box

Eye shadows are cold weather friends. In the grand old summer time, perspiration will exhaust them, motifs 'em. In Italy, during the warm season, no woman uses makeup, and there are some stunning beauties there, we're telling you. The French woman—unlike the Italian—is a confirmed makeup addict and seem to keep her health and spirits without face paint. Compared to her, the American girl is an amateur in applying the hand-tooled complexion.

There are complexions that flare up when they come in contact with soap, not many, but some. They demand a special cosmetic and here is the formula for an excellent underbody for soap: Mix together two pounds of fine oatmeal, six ounces of almond meal, six ounces of Florentine orris (powdered) and four ounces powdered castile soap. A few drops of oil of lavender imparts a pleasant and refreshing fragrance. Sprinkle the meal on a moistened washcloth and scrub.

Daily True Story

The Stolen Emerald

MANY WERE the guesses as to the real story behind the loss of Mercy Stanways' emerald ring. First let it be made clear that it was no ordinary stone.

Secondly that it was insured for exactly $25,000 and now as Tom Quinn, detective for the insurance company, laid it before the eyes of Chief of Police Murray it seemed to dare him to solve the mystery of its disappearance.

For Mrs. Stanways didn't want it back—she had called on the Chief, and it was from her that he received his first shock. Beautiful, young the social arbiter of the town and wife of the owner of the big Stanways Mills, she was a woman who commanded attention.

"You see," she explained, "the insurance money has been paid and I no longer want the ring."

The Chief made no reply. He concluded that the less he said the better it might be for all concerned.

"I shall be deeply grateful to you," she went on, "if you make no effort to run down the thief who stole this stone from me. I have asked the insurance company likewise to make no effort.

"So far no word of the recovery of the stone has appeared in the press—even my husband is ignorant of it and as he is hard pressed these days I do not want to annoy him."

The chief bowed Mrs. Stanways out. It was then that Quinn came in. "Well, Tom," said the Chief when he saw the stone, "you've brought back the emerald O. K. and now instead of the thanks of a satisfied lady you get exactly—nothing. In fact, she's as good as said and that if we'd never found it the better for us."

TOM'S STORY

Tom Quinn whistled. "So that's what I get for my trip to Panama," he said, "and what will the insurance people say to that?"

"Oh, well," answered the Chief, "they won't be out much even after paying your expenses down there but what puzzles me is why the lady doesn't want anyone to know."

Quinn grinned. "If that emerald could talk," he remarked "I imagine it might mention the name of a certain Miss Lorraine who was about here a couple of years ago."

"Go on," urged the Chief," what's at the back of your head?"

"I'll go on," said Quinn, "of course, it's only a surmise, but here's the story as I see it and I'll bet if the emerald could find a tongue it'd back me up. As I said, the Baron appeared here from New York—he had letters—introduced him to Mrs. Stanways. At first very meticulous but after he got to going there a lot and as Stanways didn't seem to object they went motoring together—with a chauffeur at first and later by themselves.

"You remember you got a tip to keep your eyes open—that the Baron was and all he was out to be—but you couldn't find anything on him.

"But suddenly the baron disappears," continued Quinn, "and then the company learns that the emerald has been lost. Here's the usual conjecture in the newspapers and then the thing is forgotten. The company pays over the twenty-four thousand and starts me getting busy with the baron——

"I'm listening," said the chief patiently

"All right—so I go to Panama on what looks like a hot tip, which it is all right. For after a lot of rummaging around I find the emerald in a high class pawnshop with a ticket against it for six thousand dollars. After a lot of red tape I get the stone and the pawn broker is out six thousand, but he gives a pretty good description of the man who got the loan, and if it wasn't the baron I'm all wet.

"So here's the way I figure it out: Mrs. Stanways got a little too fond of the baron and he held her up for the price of the emerald. He was a clever chap at that, because after she paid him the twenty-four thousand cash he grabbed the stone and beat it."

"I believe you've hit it," said the chief admiringly, "which proves that gigolos come high in the best families."

RECOVERS STONE

"Sure I've hit it," said Quinn, "the stone's been identified by the jewelers that sold it and now the question is how to get hold of the baron, take him down to Panama and let the pawnbroker identify him."

"Not so easy," said the chief, "does the lady's hubby know all this?"

"Sure he does," said Quinn.

The chief indulged in a prolonged whistle. "But," he protested, "Mrs. Stanways was just in here and asked me not to call Mr. Stanways anything about it —she doesn't want the emerald back."

Quinn reached over and gathered up the jewel. "This is a queer world," he remarked, "but not so queer as some of the people in it. Watch the papers tomorrow morning."

The Chief read about the end of the mystery in the morning paper. The missing emerald had been found according to the account in a vase where Mr. Stanways himself had mislaid it and the insurance company had received from him a check with interest covering the amount of the loss. The emerald had been returned to Mrs. Stanways, who was reported as weeping when she thanked her husband for finding it.

"Did you read it?" Quinn asked him over the phone.

"I did," said the Chief.

"What do you make of it?"

"I take off my hat to Mr. S." said the Chief.

"So do I," replied Quinn "but if I ever meet the Baron believe me——

"The same here," agreed the Chief.

DEFINITE PROMISE TO BOSTON

Chalk up a home run for Roosevelt. The dynamic Mayor Curley pauses in his spectacular battle for the New York governor to register delight in the candidate's campaign promise, conveyed through his son "Jimmie," shown with the mayor, to keep the Boston Navy Yard open. (Staff Photos.)

ENEMY'S TACTICS ASSAILED

Ferreting out enemy propaganda. No reason for city employes to "secretly stick a knife in my back," Mayor Curley says, pointing out he resisted a 20 per cent cut in city salaries at the behest of the bankers. Treachery was urged by "lady" speaker, he revealed

BATTLING FOR PRINCIPLE

Could have played "cosey" too and stood on the side lines and seen four years more of Hoover incompetence, the Mayor tells them. But he preferred to take his coat off and fight for Roosevelt, "the man who can and will lead us to a brighter day."

WARNING TO THE OPPOSITION

Un-American tactics are assailed as Mayor Curley drives home his warning that anyone attempting to combine church and elections "will not only be licked, but deserves to be licked." The mayor is now in the final stages of his drive to give Massachusetts to Governor Roosevelt. (Staff photos.)

political gatherings became known as "caucuses"

Sam Adams used to have his slates for the Committees of Safety put as we made up our slates for the City Council As I previously pointed out, after Mike Wells was killed in that train wreck in 1879 Galvin and John B. Fitzpatrick ran Ward 8 with a rich hand

Gus Galvin was smart and a leader We hated each other, but now that he has passed on I am glad to pay tribute to his talents. He was resourceful and a fighter He went the distance The notous caucus in '81 showed his nerve

Old timers still talk about that rally and the newspapers were filled with it They blasted Galvin calling us the notorious [illegible] dependents and other names but I don't think we were any rougher than the regulars. The regulars had influential backers and they called us a lot of thugs

"Both gangs were massed outside the hall waiting for the push. The gang that won the rail had the advantage They could have the last word with the voters before they stepped to the ballot box. Our plan was to keep Galvin and his gang out of the hall and run the show ourselves, but he fooled us

In Battle Royal

Galvin Coup Leads to Battle and Indictment

"He rigged up a confederate in one of his outfits to impersonate him and walk up the stairs the disguise was so good that our gang thought it was Galvin and chased him down the stairs and for blocks. Meanwhile, in the excitement the wily Galvin climbed through a rear window gained the stage and started to run the show

Pandemonium followed Who go into details" The gangs clashed Fists flew and many carried the scars of conflict That caucus occurred after we had licked the Galvin machine with the election of young Bill Taylor. After that victory they had refused to deal with us so we resolved to keep on trouncing them

Galvin told the newspapermen who rushed to the caucus to check up on casualties that I was [illegible] of a plot to murder him He compared to Dan Amy Oliver Stevens and small arms were returned against me and John La Rosa he

I was indignant I knew it was a frame up to try and break me I conferred with Dist Atty Stevens and demanded a speedy trial because the Galvin crew I were stalling it for effect After I told my story to Oliver Stevens he told me he was convinced I was telling the truth and quit pressed the indictment against me. That made me fight the Galvin crowd with greater spirit than before

Eight years later when I ran for alderman I went to see Dist. Atty Stevens again I asked him what had become of the old indictment against me He looked up the records and got out the indictment. I noticed that there was no entry as to why it had been dropped He told me he would gladly fix that, and in my presence wrote on the back of the indictment "No case" and signed his initials under it

"Now Martin," he said "no one can ever throw this indictment in your face

Marlene Dietrich Is Given Until Monday to Make Decision on Picture

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Los Angeles, April 22—Ex- ement and plenty of it on the Paramount lot. Marlene Dietrich, German actress, has walked out and with her has gone Josef von Sternberg, B. P. Schulberg, production chief, has issued an ultimatum, either Marlene and Von Sternberg begin work on "Blonde Venus" by Monday or else—. The or else, in this case, means they will be taken off salary.

The battle royal was precipitated when, having to agree on "Blonde Venus," Mr. Schulberg suggested that Marlene have someone else direct her. Marlene refused. "Blonde Venus," you see, was authored by her and Von Sternberg. The original story was approved by Mr. Schulberg and handed to someone to put into scenario form.

Louella O. Parsons

The first draft was not acceptable to Mr. Schulberg. He handed it to another writer and the revision failed to please Miss Dietrich and her director but suited Mr. Schulberg such skill, the fat, lazy owner of the general store who is married to a nasty woman. Guy Kibbee gets that role and what a chance! Lewis Milestone, who personally selected each person for the cast, told me yesterday that Kibbee had signed a contract. Speaking of contracts, Robert Montgomery stays on at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He has put his John Hancock on a new contract for a brief year.

An ambitious chap is M. Lombardi, who'll be dropping off this carousel early in June for a non-stop airplane flight around the world—I told you about it some months ago. Roger Q. Williams will be one of the co-pilots but what I'm getting at is this—Lombardi has sent me a batch of miniature post cards to fill in my address. These cards will be dropped along with other mail in Rome and Ireland where arrangements have been made—mind you, this is what Lombardi tells me—to have them signed by important folks of those countries and then mailed back here. Old stunt.

Far away from the swing of this carousel these days are Dick Rodgers and Lorenz Hart those two lads who graduated from college to write a series of successful and slightly different musicals. In school and out, there was one grand chap of Broadway whom they idealized, respected and perhaps, I'm putting it a little too strongly, a most idolized. George M. Cohan. I mean, and now, having deserted the stage and song writing business for awhile they've turned out a picture called "the Phantom President" and, of course, you'll guess it, since I've given you the lead—the star of the picture will be George M. Cohan. A slight studious looking fellow is the

Jackie Fields Is Dodging Lou Brouillard

"As far as sport is concerned," said John Heydler, president of the National League to his admiring box mate, His Excellency, Gov [illegible] D. Ely, upon being seated after the flag raising at Fenway Park [illegible] interest and such thing as depression All [illegible] weather. Sweeping his hand through the [illegible] "This splendid gathering proves it. Baseball and baseball parks have been slim, due to what I call the pessimistic [illegible] the big leagues raised. I am in favor of starting the league games not earlier than April 20. Baseball needs sunshine to get the crowds out. Old Sol will dispel early baseball depression [illegible] of an Al Smith administration will dispel our national [illegible]" smiled Gov Ely.

"Yes, even a Franklin D. Roosevelt administration!" snapped His Honor Mayor James Michael Curley, who had muffed Gov Ely's opening [illegible] going to make it this one.

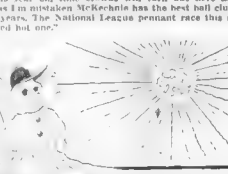
It is hard telling what might have happened if Rabbit Maranville just then hadn't caught one of Lefty Clark's southpaw sizzlers on the snoot and sent a two bagger screaming down the third base line. Being fans as well as politicians both Governor and Mayor leaped to their feet with an exuberant "Wow!" Baseball is a great pacifier. All creeds, beliefs are forgotten back of first base. President Heydler undoubtedly remembers how Rev. Nathan Krass, a Jewish rabbi, Dr. Farrar, a Protestant minister and Monsignor McCarthy, a Catholic prelate, often used to sit together back of third base at Pilots Field.

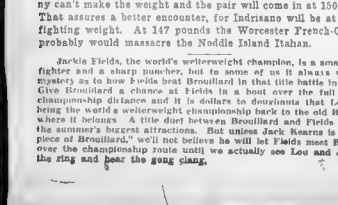
President Heydler comes around a headful of figures showing how and why baseball is in for a prosperous year. Among other things he says that the straight 50 cent bleacher admissions now charged in all New York ball parks has helped rather than hurt receipts and that Dodgers, Yankees and Giants will have one of their best financial seasons. "Boston is, and always has been, one of the best cities on the circuit," declares the National League leader. "If the Braves play first division ball this year old time crowds will turn out here at Braves Field. And unless I'm mistaken McKechnie has the best ball club Boston has boasted in years. The National League pennant race this season is going to be a red hot one."



Ernie Schaaf is taking the old haymaker down from the rack and whetting it all over in the summer cauliflower camp at Nyack. Young Stribling in Holyoke he still try it out a bit what his the [illegible] a bit on Ted Sandwina, who among other things, is the son of the once strongest woman in the world. Ted who is an English Jew, was born when his Ma was a headliner with Barnum & Bailey's Circus and President Theodore Roosevelt, after whom he was named, was his god-father. Sandwina is, or was, manager [illegible] Joe Deegan, brother of the immortal Tad. Ted can sock a bit himself, and he will make a good trial horse for Schaaf who is coming out of the stable after a two months' scissorn fol [illegible] Ernie's camp at Nyack Stribling. Next Monday night's fete at [illegible] with Sandwina will be in the nature of tune up bouts for the Wrentham Dynamiter with Mickey Walker and Prime Carnera. Schaaf is scared to both bouts, but Jimmy Johnston, Madison Square Garden matchmaker, is having troubles getting Walker [illegible] line and there still is some doubt about just when Carnera will return to the little old U. S. A. Local promoters also are trying to arrange a Schaaf-Retzlaff open air match here in Boston.

Out on the Pacific Coast a youngster has loomed up as a future foe for Schaaf it's Lee Ramage, who removed Steve Hamas from among the ranks of the Three Musketeers—Schaaf, Retzlaff and Hamas—by handing the Penn State collegian almost as bad a licking as Steve himself gave Tommy Loughran. Ramage will have to get an Eastern baptism of fire and although he is a little wild, however, before he can be considered a real rival of the Golden Boy.

Here's a thumbnail sketch of Ramage for you—Stands 6 feet 1 inch in his socks and tips the beam at 178 pounds . . . Born Oct. 1, 1910 in San Diego of Irish-American parents . . . Youngest of family of 5 boys and 3 girls. His brothers, Bill and Cy, play ball with the Phoenix, Arizona, team . . . He, himself, played second base for San Diego in the California State League in 1929 . . . He quit baseball and took up boxing to challenge our own Art Shires . . . Art, the Great, turned a deaf ear to the challenges . . . Besides being a good ball player Ramage is a good all around athlete . . . Shoots under 90 in golf, is a good surf swimmer and starred at basketball at San Diego H. S. . . . Has 16 knockouts in 50 bouts . . . Won 12 on points, fought two draws, lost one decision on points and another on a technical knockout . . . Bout with Jimmy Hanna was stopped when Ramage received a broken jaw . . . Later Lee beat his erstwhile conqueror . . . Beat Lee Kennedy and Ace Hudkins in addition to Hamas . . . Is of the boxer-slugger type and throws punches so fast and furiously is a great crowd pleaser . . . His hands are said to be a bit brittle.



None of us will saw the last match between Lou Brouillard, former world's welterweight champion, and Johnny Indrisano, the Pride of Noddle Island will be missing when the gong clangs for their duel in the Garden next week. Fur and feathers will fly. It was hoped that the pair could be brought together in a 12-round bout at championship weight for the New England title, but Johnny can't make the weight and the pair will come in at 150 pounds. That assures a better encounter, for Indrisano will be at his best fighting weight. At 147 pounds the Worcester French-Canadian probably would massacre the Noddle Island Italian.

Jackie Fields, the world's welterweight champion, is a smart, heady fighter and a sharp puncher, but to some of us it always will be a mystery as to how Fields beat Brouillard in that title battle in Chicago. Give Brouillard a chance at Fields in a bout over the full 15-round championship distance and it is dollars to doughnuts that Lou would bring the world a welterweight championship back to the old Bay State, where it belongs. A title duel between Brouillard and Fields is one of the summer's biggest attractions. But unless Jack Kearns is "given a piece of Brouillard," we'll not believe he will let Fields meet Brouillard over the championship route until we actually see Lou and Jackie in the ring and hear the gong clang.

Diamond Dust

—By JOE CASHMAN—

Another of those schedule freaks keeps the Red Sox idle in Washington today. They will conclude their three-game series with the Senators on the morrow.

Lefty Luck smiled on the Collegians for the second time in a season in the second game of their engagement at the Capital and they scored a 1 to 0 victory despite being outhit 10 to 4.

A double by Tom Oliver, who is hitting all sorts of pitching these days, followed by a single by Mo Mania put over the winning marker in the seventh.

Gen Alvin Crowder, who blanked the S x for ten innings in the opening game of the campaign, was the losing pitcher and Jack Richard got credit for the victory after relieving Crowder in the seventh.

The defeat knocked the scouts out of first place which they have been sharing with the Detroit Tigers, who whipped Cleveland 15 to 3 to gain a one point edge on the attic.

Lefty Reder Fall Three sounder gave Lloyd the whole game at first for the Sox. He got off to a bit shaky start, but settled down. It was his first start of the season, by the way, and a regular game.

Babe Ruth's three home runs in the two days give the Giants a win over the Phils and placed them out of the Nationals. League cellar, which now is occupied by none other the world's champion St. Louis Cardinals who lie before the Pirates 7 to 6.

In a game featured by home runs by Lou Gehrig, Sammy Byrd, Mickey Cochrane and Al Simmons, the champion Philadelphia Athletics topped the New York Yankees, 8 to 6, by scoring five runs in the ninth inning off Charlie Ruffing.

Bill Terry now leads in the home run race with five and eight behind him are Lou Gehrig, Babe Ruth and Jimmy Foxx each with four.

The Chicago Cubs took second place in the National League away from the Cincinnati Reds by defeating the Hawkmen 4 to 2 in a game in which the winners made only four hits off Sy Johnson and the losers only five off Don Smith.

Better late than never was the motto of Governor Ely and Mayor Curley at the Braves opener. Neither was present when the march to the flagpole started, but the Governor arrived in time to hoist the flag and the Mayor was there to team up with His Excellency as the opening batters.

The Mayor was charged with a passed ball when he let the ball get by him on a third strike.

Of course JOHN HEYDLER, president of the National League, got into Braves Field yesterday when he showed the credentials that admit him to any ball park in the country. "There is no depression in baseball," says Heydler. "All the game needs is sunshine."

The Eastern State soccer team which plays the Western State team at Fitzgerald Park, Springfield, will be minus the services of Tom Doherty of the Clan McGregors.

Doherty injured his knee a couple of weeks ago and it is still giving him trouble which will prevent him taking his place at left halfback.

A teammate, Alex Beattie has been chosen to substitute for Doherty and the eleven will not suffer for Beattie is rated on a par with the best halfbacks in the state.

The western team which has Roslund Grandquist the two Carsons, and Broman of the Worcester Scandinavians as well as several stars from Springfield and Holyoke will give the team from the eastern a hard battle.

The complete roster of State Association officials will make the trip to Springfield.

Mr. Boston

—By JACK CONWAY—

SERGEANT EDDIE MACK was bitterly denouncing the so-called prima donna of the ring when I popped in on him today.

"I have headaches as a result of trying to arrange bouts between some of the headliners," remarked Mack. "They either want the Boston Common and the State House thrown in for their services, or they desire to hand pick their opponent. My answer to both demands is NO.

"I find that most of these highly advertised fighters don't give as much effort as some of the lesser lights. Some of the best scraps furnished in Boston this year have been put up by virtually unknown youngsters. They have not yet learned to stall and tin can.

"Mickey Bishop has furnished as much whole hearted fighting during the past six months as any youngster in New England. He punched his way to a win over Billy Hood, then lost to Leo Lariviere after a hard scrap.

"Dutch Leonard of Waltham, who isn't handicapped by a fancy record, also thumped his way out front. This is why I have matched Bishop and Leonard for a ten-round bout on next Tuesday night. I felt neither of them would be held back by the thought that were headliners. They will probably go in and give the fans action."

Mr. Boston

I BELIEVE the chief reason why wrestling has been so successful during the past three years is because the mat men furnish action. They are willing to risk injury to give Old John Public a thrill. In these depression days, Old John needs some fireworks to keep him from thinking too much of his own troubles.

TOOTS MONDT was just drifting along with his wrestling show at the Boston Garden when he stumbled on Jack Washburn. The latter isn't the greatest wrestler in the world, but he has the habit of pulling the unusual. This all comes under the general heading of action.

For a time Washburn endangered himself staging one man riots but when this pastime became dangerous for Old John Public he pulled a new twinkle when he unmasked the "Masked Marvel." I don't know what Washburn will do next Wednesday night when he wrestles Jim Londos, but you may be sure he won't exhibit any shop worn tricks.

IF YOU CAN make people forget their troubles and laugh, you can make money in any form of amusement enterprise

Indrisano

I THINK YOU will find the welterweights furnishing most of the battling in New England rings this year. Lou Brouillard and Johnny Indrisano two of the best of the welterweights from these parts in England. Then there is Andy Callahan of Lawrence who has packed a wallop and is anxious to get a shot at the victor of the Indrisano Brouillard mill which takes place at the Garden on Friday night.

I LOOK FOR Jackie Fields to defend his title against either Brouillard or Indrisano in a local ring. It is not likely that Billy Petrolle and Jimmy McLarnin will exhibit their wares here.

McGregor-Bird Game Postponed

The deciding game in the Boston and District soccer league between the Clan McGregors and Bird & Sons scheduled for Sunday at Quincy has been postponed owing to a number of players from each club being included in the Eastern team which plays at Springfield next Sunday.

ART TRIPLES TO HELP BEAT DODGERS

By JOE CASHMAN

He's just plain Art Shires now with only a pair of wiggly hips and a large chew of tobacco to remind the fans of his "Whataman" days.

But what the erstwhile bad boy of the American League and present firstbaseker of the Braves has lost in color comedy and downright orneriness, he has gained in baseball ability.

His actions no longer attract the attention they did, but they do win ball games.

The Watertown native, leading the National League this fine month and no less an authority than Manager Bill McKechnie awards him the palm. Art a generous slice of the credit for the [illegible] remarkable start.

Art Shires

"Shires was directly responsible for two of the three games we won from the Giants," chirps Pilot Bill. "In one battle, he dashed down to second so fast and hard that he made Marshall step away from the bag before getting the ball and that break permitted us to stage the winning rally. The very next day, he forced Fitz to do a little more fancy retreating and again we went out and put the game on ice.

"And he has inspired his mates to follow his example with the result that the whole gang is out there hustling and fighting every minute. That's the chief reason why we have been so successful to date.

"The records tell more eloquently than I could how he has been hitting and fielding. He has a batting average of over .350, has repeatedly come through when a safety meant runs and his defensive polish has been perfect.

"I wish I had a few more like him."

Art Concentrates on Playing Baseball

Art, while modestly denying that he is more responsible than anybody else for the Tribesmen's great start, admits that he has quieted down.

"I'm getting paid to play ball. So that's what I'm doing and am going to continue to do to the best of my ability," said Shires to me," he informed your correspondent today.

"I was a bit more satisfied with a baseball job in my life than I am with the Braves, and my goal ambition is to play well enough to keep it. Let the other fellows be funny if they wish. I'm staying notable."

Art played well in the 6 to 3 victory the Braves scored over the Dodgers on the opening of the local National League season to stay in first place.

He hit a triple which developed into a run in the second, knocked in another run in the third and put over a single in a position to score by making a perfect sacrifice in the seventh.

'I'LL K. O. SCHMELING,' SAYS JACK SHARKEY

SQUIRE WILL EVEN PICK SPOT

By HYPE IGOE

New York, April 22 (INS)—"I'm coming down to New York on Tuesday and look over the new Garden bowl. When I get there, I'm going to pick out the exact spot on which Schmeling is going to fall. I'll knock that Dutchman as flat as a German pancake.

"I don't care about the crowd. Three people, the two judges and the referee will be enough for me. He won't get away from me this time. Jack doesn't run that way. I apologize to you for not having shown up in New York Monday as I has expected. See you Tuesday next."

Jack Sharkey, the trout fisherman, just in from a trip out under the open skies, talked his little piece over the long distance telephone from the office of Johnny Buckley, his manager, in Boston.

Jack will proceed to come to Gotham town to talk over camp notes, training partners, moving picture deals and such, but Buckley couldn't locate his handy man in fact, Billie had not been in direct communication with him at all and not until John walked in and stood his fishing tackle in the corner was chubby Johnny B able to put his finger on the man who would be world's heavyweight champion

Sharkey Will Weigh Around 200 for Bout

Sharkey talked enthusiastically of his chances

"My fishing trip was only one of the preliminary workouts through which I have passed. I have been working lightly, right along, though I have not been doing any boxing. I'll need that only when the time comes. Boxing now would make me go stale, to say nothing of the danger of cuts. It is time enough to take those risks when I have to," said Sharkey.

No Sharkey camp site has been selected as yet. Sponsorship of the place by naming King-ton N. Y., as his training ground.

Sharkey is under consideration S. th Hampton, Long Island, Oakdale, Greenwood Lake and Prompton Lake.

Sharkey said that he would weigh around the 200 mark for the bout, in point or two more or less low. Weight is one of the things about which he will not worry.

DEMPSEY MUST PAY FINE

Chicago, April 22 (AP)—Jack Dempsey must pay a fine of $300 and bills totaling $2800 before he will be allowed to appear in the 39 states under control of the National Boxing Association, President John V. Clinnin said today.

President Clinnin made this decision after the Mississippi State Athletic Commission notified him that Leonard Sachs, manager of Dempsey, acted in partnership with Ned Parsons of New Orleans in the promotion of a "Dempsey Day" show at Columbus Miss., November 10, 1930 despite affidavits to the contrary.

Dempsey, Sachs and Parsons have been suspended until the $300 fine and $2800 in bills accruing from the promotion are paid. The National Boxing Association has barred that Dempsey was a partner in the venture and therefore looks to him to square the debts. Dempsey declared he did not receive a cent out of the show and that he merely was a paid performer and not a boss.

The N. B. A. cleared Max Schmeling and his manager, Joe Jacobs, of misrepresenting opponents in the heavyweight champion's recent exhibition in Toronto, Ont.

THINGS WHICH INCENSE PUBLIC NOWADAYS

By B. C. FORBES

Never in my knowledge of this country's experience have the people of this country manifested such active—or bitter—interest in events. Never have they been more critical. Never have they been so moved to express their opinions. Upon what subjects do readers of this column most frequently write? Briefly:

1—The issuance of unprecedented billions of new stocks by bankers and industrialists during the boom.

2—The failure of the issuers of such securities to institute effective action to protect in any way those who invested their savings in them.

3—The multiplying evidence that many insiders have done their worst to scuttle their own ships by dumping most or all of their holdings on the public, thus aggravating demoralization.

4—The "ruthlessness," as they call it, of bankers and other institutional creditors in exacting their pound of flesh at a time when the dollar is worth so very much more than it was worth when obligations were incurred.

5—Short-selling.

6—The shilly-shallying by Congress on taxation and retrenchment.

7—The long lack of constructive leadership by President Hoover and the administration.

8—The ineffectiveness of the farm relief board.

9—Unemployment.

10—Drastic prohibition modification.

Public Wants Short-Sale Expose

Senator Walcott is totally wrong when he says the newspapers no [illegible] in printing the names of large-scale short sellers. [illegible] with the public is extremely eager to have the fullest information. One reader expresses widespread public feeling in this telegram to senators.

Short-selling by individuals and corporations 'against the box' because of inside information which was not available to the general public has become a public scandal. It is time our country should be acquainted with the facts, because this seepage of security values places people in the terrible position of not knowing where they stand. It is scandalous that Senator Walcott should back down on his quest."

Friendship Necessary in Business

Last night James A. Farrell, retiring U. S. Steel Corp. president, at a testimonial dinner, said

If I were asked to name the factors essential to business success I would emphasize the importance of friendship. Out of a long experience I have found no substitute for friendship as a lubricant of the ways down which we launch our business enterprises. No industry can be truly efficient which does not provide throughout all its activities an atmosphere of friendliness."

Next to friendship he would place experience. He also emphasized [illegible] on [illegible] and "infinite capacity for taking pains." He declared

Hears:

That traders are expecting a test of the rally. They feel there are quite a few stocks still to be liquidated. It might be well to avoid reaching for stocks on strength. As a matter of fact, investors could utilize the bulge to get rid of those holdings with a doubtful future. Later on it means cash available for purchases in the more promising situations.

A Reversal

STOCKS STEADY AFTER FRESH DOWNTURN

New York, April 22—A fresh relapse in the Wall St. stock market virtually cancelled the recovery of the previous session during the earlier trading today, but the list steadied after midday.

Selling was in meagre volume in the early trading, but the list dropped abruptly. With professionals apparently cowed by the Washington investigation and the public almost completely on the sidelines, the market was a thin affair.

NEW LOWS ARE SET

Declines of 2 to 3 points carried such issues as U. S. Steel, American. Can, Standard of N. J., Air Reduction, and Case to new lows for the bear market.

Pressure subsided by early afternoon, however, and quick recoveries of from fractions to 4 point were numerous.

Stocks found the market thin later and closed with a heavy tone, losses ranging from 1 to 5 points in representative issues.

Volume, however, was less than 1,000,000 shares. American Telephone, Atchison, Allied Chemical and Norfolk & Western declined in the neighborhood of 4, while Union Pacific was down about 5. American Tobacco "B" and New York Central yielded 2 to 3.

Wall Street was somewhat encouraged by the weekly bank statements, showing further inroads from the credit expansion program. The fact that the expected reduction in the New York reddiscount rate failed to materialize, however, while not regarded as important in banking quarters, may have prompted some quick profit taking.

Furthermore, the slight gain of $2,000,000 in currency in circulation was regarded as indicating some fresh tendency toward hoarding in certain localities, which made speculators fear the rise cautious.

Some of the early selling looked like further liquidation of collateral loans, and when such selling appears, speculators for the rise are quick to retire.

COMMERCIAL LOANS UP

The most encouraging aspect of the bank statements was the gain of $47,000,000 in "all other" commercial loans, shown by the New York member banks.

This is the first increase in commercial loans in some weeks, and some observers thought it was the first indication that the efforts of the reserve authorities to induce a more liberal lending policy was actually taking effect.

The Reserve system continued its vigorous open market operations, adding $53,000,000 to its holdings of U. S. government securities. The brokers' loan statement seemed to indicate, furthermore, that money was being driven out of the New York market back into the interior where it is needed.

Although there was a net increase in brokers' loans of $10,000,000, out of town banks cut down their loans to brokers here by $15,000,000.

Wall Street was somewhat uneasy over the approach of next Tuesday's dividend action on U. S. Steel, and forecasts that the 50-cent quarterly payment on the common would be omitted were widely circulated.

Statement of James A. Farrell, retiring president of the corporation, that we have only scratched the surface of trade possibilities in the world gave fresh hope for the more distant future. Mr. Farrell is described by his associates as a man who knows each harbor where steel can be landed, and who lives there that might buy it.

The monthly report of cigarette production, showing a substantial drop, may have influenced some selling of the tobacco issues.

N. E. Telephone Has Income of $2,371,370

New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. reports for the quarter ended March 31 net income after all charges of $2,371,370 equal to $1.77 a share on 1,333,457 shares of stock. This compares with net of $3,028,853 in the same quarter of 1931, equal to $2.32 a share on 1,332,029 shares. Deficit after dividend payment of $2 a share for the quarter was $295,544. During the first quarter of the current year the company had a net loss of 19,982 stations.

$60,00,000 Gross Seen by Buckland

New York, April 22 (AP)—The Railroad Credit Corp. will have an estimated gross revenue of $60,000,000 this year against an original estimate of $100,000,000 to $125,000,000, E. G. Buckland, president of the corporation, said today.

It was stated by Mr. Buckland that, in spite of the lower estimate of revenue, no unfavorable developments are expected.*

National Steel's Dividend Earned

New York, April 22 (AP)—Wall St. hears that the March quarter report of the National Steel Co. will show the 25 cent dividend earned by a safe margin. The company was one of the few steel companies to earn its dividend last year.

COOK-COOS

By TED COOK

President Hoover has asked Rudy Vallee to write and sing a song that "will drive away the depression."

And yet you'll find carping critics who contend that the administration never does anything.

Q. AND A. DEPARTMENT

Dear Sympathetic Aunt Bella—
Do you know where you give me a pain? Anxious.

Ans.—Aunt Bella is proud to say she is not at all interested in the personal affairs of ill-mannered people. But if Sir or Madame "Anxious" will meet her on the corner of Third and Main this afternoon, she will be pleased to venture an opinion tomorrow. And how!
Aunt (There are Limits) Bella.

HINTS TO HUSBANDS

Ten little husbands, waiting in a line,
One played the Stock Exchange,
Then there were nine.
Nine little husbands, sneaking in late,
One kicked the family cat,
Then there were eight.
Eight little husbands—one went to Heaven,
(Cyanide, sighed and died),
Then there were seven.
Seven little husbands, up to naughty tricks,
One met a platinum blonde,
Then there were six.
Six little husbands, very much alive,
One kissed his neighbor's wife,
Then there were five.
Five little husbands, tapping on a door,
One drank Jamaica gin,
And now he is no more.
Four little husbands couldn't well agree,
When the smoke of battle cleared
There were only three.
Three little husbands, wondering what to do,
A cute brunette wanted one,
And then there were two.
Two little husbands, tiring of fun,
One sassed his mother-in-law,
And that left but one.
One little husband, weary of the strife,
Kissed his secretary,
And went home to his wife.
—Leslie Curtis.

BOOKS AND CHARACTERS

By LINCOLN KIRSTEIN

The recent publication of Sean O'Faolain's (pronounced Shawn O'Feeolin's) first book, Midsummer Night Madness, (Viking) immediately raises several very interesting issues, entirely aside from its great literary value. Midsummer Night Madness carries an extremely penetrating foward by Edward Garnett. Mr. Garnett has for many years been the publisher's advisor for this distinguished English firm of Heinemann's. Through his solicitude Joseph Conrad, W. H. Hudson, Richard Jeffries, Cunningham Grahame, Liam O'Flaherty have had a great portion of their material issued to the general reading public.

The part of a publisher's reader is a very important, if usually anonymous, function. This reader not only selects those manuscripts sent in to his office as possible subjects for publication, but he also digs out of a great quantity of typescript volumes any potential value among a plethora of dull writing. He may scent some faint quality of power, of possible brilliance in a series of dreary pages in the first, completely unknown work of a young writer.

READER'S HELPFUL DUTY

It is the reader's duty, responsibility and often pleasure, to search this talent among dull stuff as flower as properly as its real capabilities will allow. It is not merely a question of adding a quotation mark in the margin, or a note at the bottom of the page:—"You might cut this"—it is rather the process of considerate personal advice which must even overlap into friendship. One needs a fresh and eye not only to problems of taste and technique—but in the very choice and use of the subject to be written about.

The publisher's reader, or rather the inspired publisher's reader, such as Mr. Garnett surely is, is not merely a literary obstetrician, but a critic of life and letters with an extraordinary insight into the creative processes of the literary artist.

In his provocative forward to Mr. O'Faolain's book he takes issue with the great Irish poet, W. B. Yeats, as to a book which 30 years ago Yeats called "the best that has come out of Ireland in my time." Mr. Garnett simply claims for MIDSUMMER NIGHT MADNESS that "it is one of the best books that has come out of Ireland in my time! But then it may also be rejoined: So few books that are any good as art come out of Ireland: if so, what does this imply?"

"EXILED" TO BOSTON

Mr. Garnett goes on to analyze the fault of the Irish people—"of the most backward of peoples in Europe; it is the fault of that people most indifferent to literature and art, and least aware of critical standards." Mr. Garnett writes as an Anglo-Irishman. He has championed Liam O'Flaherty and A. E. He points out that all the great Irishmen—George Moore, Bernard Shaw, Oscar Wilde and James Joyce had their fame and fortune made not as natives but as exiles.

Mr. O'Faolain is also an exile. Although he was born in Ireland and educated in and near Dublin in the midst of the bloody civil wars, he has traveled far and wide. Not four years ago, when he was spending two years in Cambridge and Boston, where he was editing a book of Gaelic lyrics, (at Boston College) a course in classical Irish literature, and studying Celtic at Harvard.

He has traveled across America in an auto and found an Irish wife on the way home. At present he lives by teaching English literature to English elementary school teachers.

"He has a play on Parnell in Ms. He lives in London," says Mr. Garnett, "how typical."

O'Faolain is the typical Irish man of talent; denied any means of support by his wife in his own country or America, he lives among his hereditary enemies.

SOME POWERFUL WRITING

The book, Midsummer Night Madness, itself is a collection of short stories, though some of the characters run through several of them. To say that it is an exciting book is to say less than half. It is powerful writing, full of a rich and fierce humor, and a tragic sense of life. Its stories are not for the squeamish, for they are full of violence, about a country furrowed with murder and civil disorder. The opening paragraph of the name gives more of the actual quality of his verbal powers than any description ever could.

"For a second I looked back into the city, down through the smoke at the clustered chimney-pots and roofs on whose purples and greens and blues the summer night was falling so gently as dust, falling too on the thousand tiny beacons winking and blinking beneath me to their starry counterparts above. It was just the curfew hour and the last few laggard couples went hurrying past me, their love-making ended abruptly for the night, and the Tans in their roaring Lancia patrol-cars should find them contentedly on the public streets of the city. Then I turned to the open fields and drew in a long draught of their fragrant air, their May-month sweetness, as only a man could who had been cooped up for months under one of those tiny roofs, seeing the life of men and women only through a pane of dirty, whitewashed, seeing these green fields only in the far distance from an attic skylight. Mounting my bicycle I left the last gas-lamp behind, and the pavement end, and rode on happily in the open country."

Then follows the fantastic story of the end of Henn of Henn Hall, fantastic but somehow never improbable,—the story of a left-over gentleman in benighted Ireland, still harboring two young rebels and a rebel girl in an atmosphere of terror and passion, to which the tune of the music of a cracked gramaphone playing a Mozart aria, and the echo of gunfire in the hedgerows.

GRIPS THE INTEREST

Mr. O'Faolain is a romantic writer insomuch that he makes real events something more actual than reality. All the events in the book may have happened to him or to friends of his. But they are not the even distinguished record of personal forays. He has breathed into every page the essential quality of the lush Irish air, the intense green fields, the stony roads and fine natural rhetoric of the Irish people.

Mr. O'Faolain has an amazingly accurate ear. He records the actual cadences of conversation, not the typical Irish brogue characters speak in real life, but what is more to the way they should speak, all governing surroundings of the concentrated atmosphere and action which they are concentrated by his arrangement. MIDSUMMER NIGHT MADNESS is not only important historically as the first book of a important writer, but also in itself as a work of absorbing, increasing interest.

CHINESE GIRLS TO GIVE BENEFIT

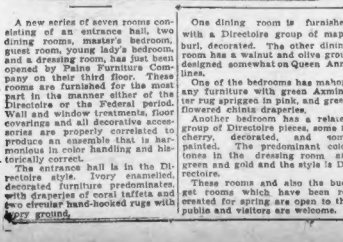
The initial attempt of any group of Chinese girls in Boston to hold a public entertainment, will be made this evening when members of the Chi Omega sorority club of Emerson house, representing the Chinese girlhood of Boston, stage a benefit entertainment and dance at Bates hall, Y. M. C. A., Huntington ave.

The affair is for the benefit of the hundreds of thousands of Chinese in Shanghai who were made destitute and homeless as a result of the recent conflict between China and Japan.

The committee in charge is headed by Dorothy Wong, president. She is assisted by Miss Winnie Eng, vice-president, Minnie Wong, Margaret Stewart and Nettie Dow.

Dr. Tehyi Hsieh, director of the Chinese Trade Bureau is to be the guest speaker. He will talk on "The True Situation in China."

MASTER'S BEDROOM AT PAINE'S



A new series of seven rooms consisting of an entrance hall, dining room, master's bedroom, guest room, young lady's bedroom, and a dressing room, has just been opened by Paine Furniture Company on their third floor. These rooms are furnished for the most part in the manner either of the Directoire or the Federal period. Wall and window treatments, floor coverings and all decorative accessories are properly correlated. Produce an ensemble that is harmonious in color handling and historically correct.

The entrance hall is in the Directoire style. Ivory enamelled, decorated furniture predominates, with draperies of coral taffeta and two circular hand-hooked rugs with ivory ground.

One dining room is furnished with a Directoire group of maple and sprigged in pink and green flowered chintz draperies.

Another bedroom has a relaxed group of Directoire pieces in cherry, decorated, and some painted. The predominant color tones in the dressing room are green and gold and the style is Directoire.

These rooms and also the budget rooms which have been recreated for spring are open to the public and visitors are welcome.

Face and Hands

In Them You Read Character

ANNA MAY WONG'S CLEVER POSE

This shows the face and hands of Anna May Wong, young Chinese actress, born in the United States. There could be no better arrangement of a photograph to show, in condensed space, the spirit dwelling within.

From the face and the hands you learn more than from all the rest of the body, all, in fact, that you need to know.

The eyes reflect the mind and spirit, the mouth reveals "temperament," emotions, cold, passionate or neutral.

The forehead, in this case too much concealed, is most important of all, for that which is back of the forehead is really THE HUMAN BEING.

As for the hands, they tell a thousand stories. The fingers, long, tapering, with the hand itself narrow, show what we call "refinement," absence of hard work through a number of generations.

Fingers blunt at the ends, with broad nails, tell one story.

Too much "refinement" in the hand may show that a person belongs to a family dying out, losing energy. Refinement is admirable, but there must always be STRENGTH, to make refinement efficient and useful.

In the thumb alone you may read character.

According to the Kiralfy brothers, theatrical men of long ago, you can tell from the thumb the shape of the whole body. The Kiralfys, producing the "Black Crook," and other performances in which young ladies were displayed in tights, in the old days, needed young ladies with well-shaped legs. But the Kiralfys said: "All we need to see is the girl's thumb. As soon as we see the thumb we know just how she will look in tights." This, presumably, saved the young ladies applying for jobs some embarrassment, and saved time for the Kiralfys.

Study hands and faces, eyes for sincerity, the chin for force of character, the ears for generosity, or the reverse, the mouth for emotion, the forehead for intelligence, the hands for the physical and racial past, and you study a human being completely.

In addition, you will be interested in this young face, combining the mystery of the East with the Western influence of birth in this country.

Beer Means Many Jobs

Jacob Ruppert, who owns a baseball team and was a brewer of paris, says he would invest $5,000,000 AT ONCE if Congress would permit the sale of beer.

That would mean jobs for 1000 men IN ONE BREWERY, not to mention the others who would be put to work making auto trucks, brewing machinery, bottling equipment and harvesting the wheat in the fields.

Joseph E. Doherty of Boston, a conservative man, estimates that the manufacture and sale of beer would create a Five Billion-Dollar industry.

The plants which made beer would have to be overhauled and refitted. New plants would be established. Coopers, clerks and mechanics would be employed by the thousands. From the banks which would loan money now idle, to the railroad men who would haul the raw material and deliver the malt products, a great new army of men would be put into the earning class.

The creation of a new industry would be of minor importance compared to the elimination of the evils of prohibition. But it is a minor adventure we could well stand at a time like this.

Caring for the Babies

Mrs. May F. Heroy informs us that the girls of the Junior League have gone in for baby work.

Through their Speedwell Society—you will note the name "Speedwell"—they take convalescent children unable for one reason or another to obtain adequate care in the family home and place them in foster homes, where they receive nourishing food, an ample supply of milk and the medical and nursing care necessary to restore them to firm health.

The average cost of the care of these children is $1.61 per day, which is an interesting comparison with the eightsen cents a day one of the New York cities is grudgingly expending to feed its unemployed.

The girls of the Junior League are lifting the burdens from homes unable to bear them. For this humanitarian work they are deserving of the utmost commendation.

New York Day by Day

Thoughts While Strolling

NEW YORK, April 22—Thoughts while strolling: A beautiful white Russian wolf hound always reminds me of Dolores. Gus Edwards and Roxy look alike. They say Mayor Walker has a diary in secret shorthand—like Pepys. De Zemler, the Gold Coast barber. Henry L. Doherty stepping along briskly.

Claire Luce, a Rochester, N. Y., girl, who made good in the city. One of New York's radiantly blue white days. My former managing editor—Frell Knowles. Somehow I'd like to see Genevieve Tobin drive a truck. Irving Caesar looks as though he had just bit into an Indian turnip.

Those Jap valets who suck in their breath. Whenever I hear anyone talking French, I ache to take the next boat. A delicatessen with a floriated marble facade. Another favorite person—"Deac" Aylesworth. Whitney Warren's Latin Quarter hat. What became of the poop-poop-doop girl, Helen Kane?

Not so many fancy-painted golfers rushing toward Grand Central this summer. Clare (Jay) Gould is waxing plump, too. Norman Ferris has the glacial aloofness of a novelized English Lady. Skittish ladies who peek before stepping on penny scales. Art Samuels of Harper's Bazar.

I never read fashion magazines, but love their advertisements. One word description of May Christie—fluffy. Something comfortable about hook-on bow tie wearers. New York has an over-supply of racketeering lawyers. Brock Pemberton still biding his time.

Jack Yellen, the music publisher. What an appropriate name! And there's the vaudeville pianist whose real name is Pianidoni. Somehow I've always wanted to introduce Harry Wagstaff Gribble to Peg Entwisle. You know, Mr. Gribble, Miss Entwisle. Then there's Angna Enters and Glangea Menter.

Actors of another day straining against oblivion. Those hatless young doctrinites from Columbia. Warden Lawes of Sing Sing has the dreamy look of a bibliophile. Paul Muni. Once of the Gnetto. And now a star on Broadway. A zeppelin slides over the Hudson. So life rolls on.

Swank cigarettists now have a special pocket tailored into their coats—a small cache in the inside front, easily reached by the left hand.

When Earl Carroll was forced, temporarily Broadway hopes, out of the theater bearing his name, he slipped off quietly for Europe with the fellow who has been his closest companion during all his vicissitudes —an illusory character known as Count Davis. The Count is a splendidly valeted and happy-go-lucky person. A mixture of Rabelais and Toto. Although owning a Long Island estate his title and income are as mysterious as his grinning self. He has a fine flow of exuberance which seems to please the unsmiling Earl, and he goes nowhere without him.

Add yokel yens: To wear an asafoetida bag and ear muffs with a brass slip-rod to a Sutton Place tea.

Humorists are often mute bunched. Someone tells me a well polished bench in the lounge at the Friars the other day included Harry Hershfield, Joe Cunningham, Bugs Baer, Joe Laurie, Jr., and Lou Holz. Not a joke was cracked.

Still on the other hand I saw Leon Gordon, Ben Ali Haggin and Norman Bel Geddes at another table recently and they were not painting pictures either.

A special delivery has just jogged me out of that sublime vacancy so necessary to columning. It is from an astronomer, warning that the earth, now wabbling from two years of anxiety, may crack at any moment. As one who has no particular horror of earthly extinction, I rather hope, however, the catastrophe will be delayed until the day after tomorrow's afternoon. At 2:30 o'clock on that date the suave Fred Keating has promised to show me how to place a coin in my palm and while you are looking, pat-t, it disappears. After that the world can put on its evanishment.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Defeatism

WE'RE CURIOUS creatures—we humans. We all want to be important; want to prove our superiority in some manner. That's natural. Even a turnip wants to get ahead.

But suppose we can't achieve importance through success —then what?

THEN MANY OF US TRY TO ACHIEVE IMPORTANCE THROUGH DEFEAT; AND WE BECOME QUITE AS CONCEITED ABOUT OUR FAILURE AS WE COULD POSSIBLY BECOME ABOUT SUCCESS!

Elsie Robinson

"Defeatism," the psychologists call it. And you've met hundreds of defeatists—some frankly sour; some pathetically appealing; all with a hard luck story.

Here's a quiet girl who has never had a sweetheart.

There's a queer fellow who can never hold a job.

You begin to make suggestions.

You know an awfully nice fellow. Maybe you could arrange a meeting for her.

Or you've heard of a job. You'd be glad to give him a letter.

Eagerly you offer your plans. Now, surely, these sad faces will lighten with hope!

But they do nothing of the sort.

To the contrary, their gloom seems to deepen.

You redouble your efforts. You almost yodel in your efforts to be a little ray of sunshine.

Nothing doing! Each argument you advance is met with a gloomy rejection. Yes; it's very nice of you to offer to help, but it wouldn't do any good. There's no use trying. They never have any luck. The cards are stacked against them.

Presently, as your optimism persists, a curious change creeps over them. Their mouths set stubbornly. Their eyes narrow into angry, suspicious slits.

Amazingly it dawns upon you that they are getting mad! And don't like your helpful suggestions. They don't seem to want to be helped! They act exactly as if you were trying to harm them—rob them of something!

And you are. You are robbing them of THEIR ONE CLAIM TO SUPERIORITY.

These frightened, muddled, peevish souls have never been able to succeed as healthier souls succeed; yet in them, as in all living creatures, persists that desire for superiority. In some way they MUST put them selves on record. But they have no success to put on record, AND SO THEY MAKE A RECORD OF FAILURE.

If they can't have more good luck than the other fellow, they can, at least, have more bad luck. If they can't prove that they are Fate's favorites, they can prove that they are the world's worst martyrs—cruelly picked on, double-crossed and two-timed.

And this scheme isn't as dumb as it appears. It has many mightily attractive points. In the first place, it's easy. It takes hard work to be a success, but any flat tire can be a failure. And the flatter you are, the more convincing your argument, and the more sympathy you can command.

Indeed, nobody commands attention as constantly as the perfect failure. His family can't possibly forget him, and he enlists the sympathy of every passing stranger.

Even when that sympathy turns to disgust and rage, it's jake with the defeatist; for he's still in the spot-light, and he's still being picked upon. He's still making a record of defeat.

Just Folks

Ownership of a Yacht

Once in an idle moment I remarked:
"I own a yacht to sail the southern seas,
And when upon that vessel I've embarked,
I live a life of luxury and ease."

Two weeks this year upon the Olive K.
The steward stood to heed my beck and call,
The port we sought lay many miles away.
Said one, "You do not own that ship at all.

"'Tis known the Olive K. belongs to Ket,
'Tis so recorded in the book marine."
"That's very true," I answered him,
"And yet you fail to grasp just what I mean.

"Since I've his friendship, by his own design
I share with him adventure's glorious thrills.
Once I'm on board, the lovely ship is mine,
With this exception—Ket pays all the bills."

The Way Out

I. Prosperity Loan

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser

The prolonged business depression and far-reaching unemployment constitute a broad challenge to political and business leadership. Instead of decrying the lack of leadership the Hearst newspapers desire to make such contribution as they can to constructive, forward-looking economic leadership. The depression should be attacked simultaneously on all fronts. The emergency calls for the spirit of a field marshal who can co-ordinate and synchronize various remedial campaigns.

CONGRESS, which purported to be guided by the "soak-the-rich" slogan in formulating in the lower House the hodgepodge tax bill, HAS IN REALITY BEEN SOAKING THE POOR through its negative attitude toward sound unemployment relief.

Lack of jobs for 8,000,000 men and women desirous of employment, and only part time employment for millions of others, not only make it impossible for these unfortunate fellow citizens to maintain their standard of living, but also result in the unbalancing of all business which suffers from insufficiency of buyers.

In the circumstances, Congress should no longer ignore the advice given by forty-six eminent economists, to the effect that a Federal bond issue for accelerating national, State and local public works would help to check the vicious circle of depression and generate counter forces making for recovery and re-employment of labor.

WITH its unmatched credit, the Federal Government is in a uniquely favorable position to break the economic impasse by embarking on a soundly conceived, job creating program for accelerating public works. It could lay especial emphasis on projects with earning power, like toll bridges and tunnels, and perhaps slum removal, which would be self-liquidating.

By speeding up useful public works, in co-operation with local agencies of government, Uncle Sam would re-employ at least a fraction of the idle directly and would also indirectly call to industrial employment numerous others who would supply cement, steel, copper and other materials to public workers.

The return of at least a part of the unemployed to payrolls would promote buying of consumers' goods, and would in time create a reverse cycle of favorable developments.

The change might well convince the private business executive that the turning point had come when commodity prices were ready to rise, and such a conversion would perhaps go far toward inducing him to restock normal inventories.

IT is not a question of whether the Government can afford to raise $5,000,000,000 in five annual instalments through bond offerings. The inescapable question is whether a government, with immense fixed charges, can afford to stand by and watch the principal fountains and springs, from which taxable revenue flows in time of prosperity, dry up.

In place of apathy toward the La Follette bill, which is in accord with modern economic thinking, Congress should immediately turn its attention to this pivotal project in a campaign for economic reconstruction in the United States.

Prosperity Must Be Built From the Bottom

By Claude G. Bowers

WITH A FEELING of detachment, we have read the Roosevelt speech in Minnesota and re-read the Smith speech at Washington, and are puzzled over the excited tone of the press in commenting on them. The Smith speech was rich in good sound constructive ideas—the tariff, the prosperity loan; and it is easy to agree with him that demagogic attempts to array class against class under existing conditions are vicious. The Roosevelt speech impresses us as the expansion of a proper point of view regarding the necessity of so changing the policy of many years to include in government policy the more than thirty million people dependent on the farm.

The farmer passed out of the governmental picture when the Government passed to the Hamiltonians immediately after Appomattox. Only incidentally did a million ever give a thought to the tillers of the soil. His scheme of government and society revolved entirely around the industrialists and financiers. In his report on manufactures he mentions the farmers—because it had been urged that his plan made no provision for them. The best he was able to do was to reply that, with factories, it would be possible for farmers to increase their incomes by putting their women and children at work in the mills. He went into detail to show from the records in England that in certain industries young children could be employed to advantage.

Farmers Shoved Out of Governmental Picture

After the war between the states, when privilege was riotous and tariffs were increased, there was a bitter protest from the agricultural States on the ground that by making the farmer buy in a protected market while selling his products in an open market, agriculture would be ruined. The Chicago Tribune, under the brilliant editorship of Horace White, fought this change in policy on the theory that it would destroy the farmers. The New York Chamber of Commerce opposed it on the ground that it "would mar the prosperity of agriculture, by increasing the cost of the crops without enhancing the price of its products."

And Senator Grimes of Iowa, able and honest beyond most men of his time, warned time and again that the farmer was being shoved out of the governmental picture, and that the inevitable result would be the reduction of agriculture to bankruptcy. It was Grimes, sick unto death, who deliberately invited the wrath of the Radicals by having himself carried into the Senate Chamber to vote against the impeachment of Andrew Johnson.

Now these men were not hostile to industrialists or bankers or anyone else; they insisted merely that the most agricultural interests should not be sacrificed to increase the earnings of any other class through governmental action. Those responsible for the policy against which Grimes protested were certainly not deliberately trying to hurt the farmers. They merely excluded the farmers from governmental consideration.

It is literally true that for fifty years the farmers have been the poor relations of government; and the present bankruptcy of agriculture is the result.

And with the purchasing power of more than 30,000,000 Americans utterly destroyed, there is not an industrialist or a banker who is not feeling the pinch.

The Man at the Top

We have been dominated by a political school which, no doubt, honestly, felt that if government looked after the man at the top, and made him prosperous, the man at the bottom would automatically share in the prosperity. This school thinks now that if the man at the top is assisted, prosperity will return. There is little or nothing thus far done for the men at the top that does not meet with our approval; but nothing thus far done for the men at the top has given a job to the man below. And the man at the top is suffering today because the man at the bottom does not have the money with which to buy. And there will be, can be, no restoration of prosperity until the purchasing power of the 30,000,000 farmers and the more than 40,000,000 others, dependent on jobs that are lost, is at least partially restored.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has served a good purpose. It has greatly reduced the number of bank failures and relieved the frozen credit condition; but there is more unemployment now than in January. It has served one necessary purpose, but it has not affected the problem of the unemployed.

There is just one plan that promises to restore the purchasing power of many millions and call for the expansion of industry; and this will make the easy credit facilities, now all but worthless, worth while; and will put men to work in the mills to meet the needs of the expanding demand.

This is a prosperity loan.
